NORRIS UPHOLDS WHIPPLE

The epoch-making suit to force the New Haven directors to disgorge the money they pilfered from the road—the news of which was printed exclusively in the Sunday AMERICAN—attracted the highest commendation today by experts on railroad affairs and men high in the public confidence.

Sherman L. Whipple, who will be attorney in the suit, is one of the ablest lawyers in Massachusetts, and will be acting for a group of small stockholders of the road. In a signed article in the Sunday AMERICAN he outlined his plan; and the other Boston papers today contain liberal extracts from this article by Mr. Whipple.

Senator Norris of Nebraska, author of the resolution under which the Interstate Commerce Commission is investigating the New Haven, was one of those who praised the suit.

Senator Norris said:

"The only way, in my judgment, to obtain an honest reorganization is to uncover and throw the glare of publicity upon the wrongs that have been done and fight for restitution. The New Haven will start in upon a new era that will ultimately bring a return to its former proud position in the railroad world."

MAY ABROGATE CONTRACTS.

Attorney-General McReynolds refused to comment upon the suit. Chairman Adams of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce praised it, as did Representative Rainey of Illinois. Colonel William N. Amory of New York, who conducted a similar suit against another railroad, hailed it as a step in the right direction. Roger W. Babson of Wellesley believes the suit may compel the abrogation of some of the contracts with which the New Haven is now loaded. Mayor Curley and former Mayor Fitzgerald rejoiced at the news, and Frederick P. Fish of Brookline looks for the suit to "bring about the desired results."

REPURCHASE LINES.

Attorney Whipple's plans are to bring the suit in the Massachusetts Supreme Court, finally it from there to the Supreme Court of the United States if necessary. The exact nature of the suit will be: To ask the court to order the New Haven directors responsible for buying competing lines at a tremendous loss,

MILITANT ATTACK ON THE KING

LONDON, June 8.—Suffragette furies caused pandemonium today at the International Polo Show by making violent attacks on King George and Queen Mary.

While the King and Queen were watching the judging of the competitions for the King Edward Challenge Cup, a woman with her head covered with a heavy veil and wearing a long cloak rushed to the royal box. As the woman reached the edge of the box she screamed. "Votes for women!" and began to harangue the King and Queen.

Before she could get any further she was seized by two policemen and by Colonel Payne, the equerry in waiting to the King, and was forcibly ejected.

The attack on the King and Queen was only a beginning of a demonstration never witnessed before within the walls of Olympia.

As soon as one woman was ejected another rose to take her place, only to be thrown out in her turn. One woman attempted to chain herself to the arena, but was dragged or thrown out of the doors.

Little attention was paid to the horses during the rioting and only a few spectators noticed the fact that Russian officers won the King Edward challenge cup.

MEETINGS BROKEN UP.

Public meetings in connection with the militant outrages is growing daily throughout Great Britain.

Reports from the provinces show that suffragette meetings organized yesterday were generally broken up and the women threatened with violence.

At Ilford, some miles to the east of London, the speakers were pelted with tomatoes and other missiles and an unsuccessful attempt was made by the crowd under the leadership of a woman to upset the wagon from which the suffragettes were speaking.

The orator escaped into the residence of the local leader of the militant society and the crew afterward bolted the house with stones and broke every window in the place.

SUPREME COURT PLEA FOR THAW

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Former Governor Stone of Pennsylvania, today appeared before the full bench of the Supreme Court of the United States and made application to have Harry Kendall Thaw admitted to bail.

Thaw now is in custody of Sheriff Holman A. Drew of Coos County, N. H., by order of Federal Judge Aldrich of New Hampshire. Judge Aldrich upheld Thaw's appeal for habeas corpus, but passed up to the highest court the question of whether Thaw should be set at liberty.

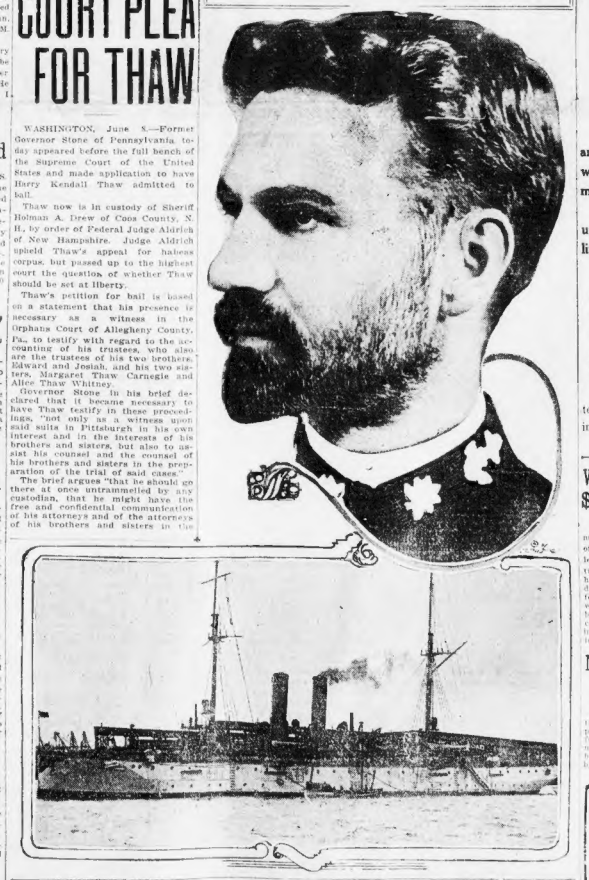
Thaw's petition for bail is based on a statement that his presence is necessary as a witness in the Orphans Court of Allegheny County, Pa., to testify with regard to the accounting of his trustees, who also are the trustees of his two brothers, Edward and Josiah, and his two sisters, Margaret Thaw Carnegie and Alice Thaw Whitney.

Governor Stone in his brief declared that it became necessary to have Thaw testify in these proceedings, "not only as a witness upon said suits in Pittsburgh in his own interest and in the interests of his brothers and sisters, but also to assist his counsel and the counsel of his brothers and sisters in the preparation of the trial of said cases."

The brief argues "that he should go there at once untrammelled by any custodian, that he might have the free and confidential communication of his attorneys and of the attorneys of his brothers and sisters in the preparation and trial of said audits."

It also is contended that Thaw should be given his liberty in order that he might have greater opportunity for free counsel with his legal advisers in the case of the State of New York, demanding his return to Matteawan Asylum.

Commander N. C. Twining and the United States cruiser Tacoma, which, with the Sacramento, pursued the Mexican gunboats Bravo and Zaragosa, sent by Huerta to blockade Tampico.



DICTATOR RESCINDS ORDER TO BLOCKADE; WAR CRISIS PASSES

TAMPICO, June 8.—The Mexican gunboats Bravo and Zaragoza were sighted off the coast early today. They were followed by the American cruisers Tacoma and Sacramento, which have been observing their movements.

As soon as they were sighted the San Francisco got up steam preparatory to sailing as a convoy for the Ward liner Antilla.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—It was officially announced today that General Huerta has rescinded his order for the blockading of Tampico. Formal announcement of the annulment of the order was given to Secretary of State Bryan by Senor Riano, the Spanish Ambassador here.

"The blockade of Tampico has been suspended!" was the text of the order issued in Mexico City through Esteva Ruiz, Acting Minister of Foreign Relations, and sent to Washington.....

GREAT RELIEF TO ADMINISTRATION.

For some time before Ambassador Riano took his important news to Mr. Bryan reports were current that the dictator had rescinded his order which was aimed to prevent the delivery of a large cargo of arms and ammunition consigned to the Constitutionalists at Tampico.

Efforts to confirm the reports failed until the Spanish envoy reached the State Department. A heavy load was lifted from the minds of administration officials by the ambassador's news.

During the forenoon pessimism had held sway and it was feared that Huerta would force the issue to the extent of provoking hostilities. Influence of the foreign envoys at Mexico City is believed to have had a large part in forcing Huerta to alter his plans.

This action on the part of President Huerta removed a grave menace to the mediation proceedings and an air of relief was apparent at the White House and the State Department following the receipt of the ambassadors' notification.

The dispatch from Mexico City stating that a "suspension" of the blockade had been ordered indicated

CARRANZA OUTLINES HIS PLANS FOR PACIFICATION OF MEXICO TO THE AMERICAN

RURAL CREDITS AND EDUCATION HIS AIM

SALTILLO, June 8.—General Venustiano Carranza, provisional President of the Constitutionalists, set up his government today in Saltillo, his home city, which he left on the day President Madero was killed, more than a year ago.

General Carranza has notified the mediators at Niagara Falls that he will answer the latest communication from here. It is probable, however, that the transmission of this reply will be delayed for some time, at least until after Carranza has selected all the members of his Cabinet and conferred with them.

By GERALD BRANDON.

DURANGO, June 6.—(Delayed in transit)—"My first official act upon installing my new government in Saltillo will be to order an accurate appraisal of all property in Mexico," said Venustiano Carranza to me today.

We were seated in his private car surrounded by the members of his new cabinet, and while the train thundered past the ruins of burned stations and bridges that stand as mute witnesses of the vandalism that has desolated Mexico in the past four years he granted me an interview.

BURDENS BORNE BY THE POOR.

"Up to the present time the main burden of taxation has been borne by the poor," continued the first chief of the Constitutional movement.

"When I was governor of the State of Coahuila I made an appraisal of the property included in the municipality of Saltillo. My figures were 60,000,000 pesos, which total was exactly fifty times greater than that upon which the taxation had been based previously. I found that the hovels were appraised at their full value, while the mansions of the rich were valued at ridiculously low figures.

"The public market places where the peon sells his tray full of fruit and vegetables were so taxed as to render even larger revenues to the municipality than did the entire larger commerce where the invested capital was many thousand times greater.

"Do I understand you to mean that you will inaugurate a progressive scale of taxation that will lift the burdens from the people who are poor and throw it upon the rich?" I asked.

"No, that is not my purpose at present. We will continue to impose a fixed taxation irrespective of the wealth of the taxpayers.

PROBLEM AFTER PEACE.

"The rising scale which has been instituted in the United States and the new income tax law is not authorized by our code, and will have to be studied diligently before being adopted by us. That is a problem which will be solved later after peace is restored."

"The financial problem seems to me one of the most pressing that confronts Mexico," I ventured. "How do you propose to solve it? Can you issue money in the foreign market?"

"I anticipate no trouble on that score, once that we are settled in Mexico City," answered Carranza confidently.

"For the present we have no need of cash. We make all that we require.

"But what stands behind the currency that that you and the State governments of Sonora, Chihuahua, Durango, Sinaloa and Coahuila are issuing so profusely?"

"The law under which this currency is issued guarantees it with all the resources of the Mexican nation. However, the time and method of payment has not yet been decided upon. After peace has been restored the matter will be taken care of."

TO DECLARE INVALID ALL ACTS OF HUERTA

"And the Federal 'rales' with which Huerta has been paying his troops?"

"They are valueless. My first act as chief of the Constitutionalist cause was to declare all acts of the usurper null and void."

"Does that include international treaties that he has entered into, as well as concessions that he has granted to foreigners, such as to the British oil king, Lord Cowdray?"

"Yes. It includes his every act since he betrayed and assassinated President Madero. We gave timely warning, and every person or nation that has dealt with Huerta will find to his cost that the traitor had no authority to bind the Mexican nation financially or otherwise."

"How about foreign claims for property damage suffered at the hands of either contending party? When will they be paid?"

"That has not yet been decided. We recognize our liability to foreigners for such losses as may be satisfactorily proved, but the matter of payment must wait for a while."

SAYS NO CONFISCATION.

"What will be done about the Spaniards who have been exiled by Villa and other military chiefs?"

"Such of them who have not engaged in illegal participation in Mexican politics may return and will be assured absolute protection in their persons and property. The Constitutionalist program does not authorize confiscation. The great Benito Juarez said: 'Respect for the rights of others is peace.' We will confiscate nothing. Not even the property of our open enemies. There are certain persons who claim title to immense stretches of land which they have acquired illegally. These cases will be submitted to the courts."

"But how then will the government acquire the enormous acreage required to distribute land among all the sixteen million inhabitants of Mexico?"

"Now you are touching upon a very difficult problem. Before anything drastic can be done in amelioration of our agrarian troubles, the matter must be carefully studied by competent men whose recommendations will influence the necessary legislation. This will be attended to as soon as possible. Where land is needed for distribution it will readily be forthcoming. The taxation of undeveloped property will make the big land owners willing to sell. And then there is always expropriation, too.

THE AGRARIAN PROBLEM.

"Much prominence has been given to the agrarian problem. That is important, I realize, but still it is only one of many ills under which the Mexican people suffer. Will the shoemaker and barber wish to abandon their callings to dedicate themselves to the cultivation of a patch of land about which there is now nothing? It is necessary that the new regime help the city dweller as well as the agriculturist.

"The reforms must be sweeping. This is a social revolution. Madero's was a political one. He fought for free suffrage and anti-re-election. The needs of the people go still deeper."

"What will you do with the men who today are fighting on your side? Will you start the construction of wagons and railroads so as to give them work after the triumph of your cause?"

"That will depend on whether there are more men under arms at the close of the war than will be needed for the new standing army. The old Federal army will be done away with. Not a single Federal will be retained. Those who persist in their ignoble defence of the usurper will be dealt with summarily according to the law of January 25.

CARRANZA'S PROGRAM FOR HIS GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO

EQUAL taxation for all.

Accurate appraisal of all property.

Every act of Huerta's to be declared null and void.

Mexico's foreign liabilities guaranteed, but payment of war damages to be delayed until domestic problems are solved.

Non-partisan Spaniards to be protected.

Agrarian problems to be studied thoroughly; all classes to be helped.

Constitutional army to be used as basis of standing army. Federal soldiers surrendering to be amnestied.

Madero's murderers to die.

Huerta to be punished as he deserves.

Commissions appointed to study financial, educational, transportation and judicial problems.

COMMISSIONERS NAMED TO STUDY PROBLEMS

"What other reforms have you in view?"

"There is so much to be done that I really don't know to what to answer. I have appointed commissions to study most of the problems that confront us, and after their report have been presented I will have more to tell you. For one thing, there is a project of a national bank, which will be the only one permitted to issue currency. This currency will be backed and guaranteed by bullion deposits in the national treasury.

"Then there will be another bank also national in its scope whose specialty will be the loaning of money to small agriculturists. As to the many concessionary banks that now exist I imagine that most of them will be unable to meet their liabilities on account of the demands Huerta has made on them lately, and they probably will disappear.

SCHOOLS MULTIPLIED.

"The extending of railroads is also very important. There are at present several lines whose construction has been paralyzed on account of the war. These will be pushed as rapidly as possible, especially the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient, which runs from the northern border to the Pacific Coast and the Durango-Sonora branch of the Pacific Coast Railway.

"The completion of these roads will do much to develop the Pacific Coast States, which are today almost isolated from the rest of the republic.

"It is also my purpose to see that all Mexican laws be strictly enforced. While it is true that a great deal of legislative reform is needed, the trouble lies mainly in former non-observance of the code. Justice will be impartially meted out. Schools will be multiplied.

"I have sent to New York an extremely intelligent observer to study American methods of municipal service, such as police, sanitation, etc. Another expert is studying railroad legislation and administration."

"When will the American forces evacuate Vera Cruz? Have you any agreement with Washington concerning this?"

"I have nothing to say at present on this matter. My view has already been expressed, and especially now that negotiations are being carried on. It would be inopportune to talk."

"I understand from one of the men closest to you that President Wilson has practically promised to turn Vera Cruz over to the first Constitutionalist army that approaches and can prove its ability to protect foreign interests. Is this true?"

"I refuse to answer."

SILENT ON MEDIATION.

"And I also understand from another of your counselors that the mediation proceedings at Niagara Falls have no other object than to give you time to advance southward and save the United States from the necessity of striking inland from Vera Cruz. Is this true?"

"I have nothing more to say."

And, leaning back in his chair, the first chief of the revolution began a personal reminiscence, which plainly indicated that the interview was over.

"One moment, General," I interrupted. "Will you tell me what you intend to do with Huerta if you capture him?"

Carranza laughed aloud, and his merriment was echoed by the outrounding ring of Cabinet officers.

"I have a thousand letters from all over Mexico containing suggestions on this score," he answered. "The most popular seems to be that Huerta be imprisoned in a cage, deprived of alcoholic drink and exhibited throughout the country."

"But, seriously, General, what do you intend to do with him?"

The first chief grew grave.

"He will receive the punishment merited by his crimes," he soberly said.

"And his ashes will be taken for out to sea and scattered to the four winds," added one of the secretaries. "Mexico cannot spare an inch of ground for the repose of the mortal remains of the traitor."

TRACING 95% OF SICKNESS---

Recent discoveries have caused the physicians of the world to come out plainly and state that 95% of all diseases is due directly or indirectly to accumulated waste in the Lower Intestines.

Of course, we all know that Constipation clogs the system and brings on countless ills, but whether we are constipated or not, waste is bound to gather in the Lower Intestines. The blood circulation takes up its strong poisons and sends them through the system, weakening it and making us below par all the time—subjecting us to every morbid disease that may be prevalent.

Keep, therefore, this waste down. Take judiciously a laxative which gently helps Nature to rid you of this noxious waste, and cleanses your Liver and Bowels to be clean and yourself consequently bright, able and healthy.

HUERTA CALLS OFF TAMPICO BLOCKADE

that Huerta had not completely abandoned his purpose of establishing a blockade, but it is nevertheless believed that the order will never be put into force.

BELIEVE ORDER WAS BLUFF.

That the blockade order was a bluff on Huerta's part by which he expected to cause a new tangle is now generally believed. It was so quickly "called" by the American government that he probably decided it was wise for him to yield with dignity to the pressure brought by the envoys at his capital acting on the suggestions of the mediators.

Senor Riano stated that General Huerta had not instructed him to protest to the State Department against the delivery of the Antilla's arms and ammunition at Tampico.

"I acquainted Mr. Bryan officially with the intention of General Huerta to rescind his order to blockade the Panuco River. I was not authorized to make any other representations," said the ambassador, who seemed to be greatly relieved.

When Secretary of the Navy Daniels was informed of Huerta's action, he said: "A great load has been taken from my mind. Huerta, no doubt, has placed himself in a very favorable light before the A-B-C mediators."

"The American warships which have taken the Mexican gunboats under surveillance will remain on their assignment. Admiral Badger today was instructed to report the present position of the Mexican gunboats and any action they may take as to their departure or anchorage.

"We are dealing with what has happened. I will not state or discuss what will happen," said Secretary of State Bryan in reply to inquiries as to whether the Antilla would be prevented from landing her cargo of arms at Tampico in return for Huerta rescinding of the blockade order.

AMERICAN DELEGATES SUBMIT PEACE PLAN

By LAURENCE TOD.

Staff correspondent of the American.

MEDIATION HEADQUARTERS, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 8.—The American delegates today submitted to the mediators a comprehensive plan for the settlement of the entire Mexican problem. It takes up the Tampico flag incident, the presence of American troops at Vera Cruz, the pacification of Mexico, recognition of a provisional government and the position of the United States toward the internal affairs of the republic.

That the plan was drafted after a few consultations with the agents of General Carranza in Washington and that it meets with the approval of the Constitutionalists is the understanding here.

"The Americans expect Carranza to send delegates here if their plans are favorably received."

COUNTER PROPOSITION.

"The mediators have heretofore submitted to us a complete plan and we have now submitted to them our plans," said Justice Lamar after a brief conference with the South American diplomats. "Our counter proposition contains a number of points which have been under discussion, but upon which there has been neither agreement nor disagreement."

the mediators had made no reply, but would lay the plan before the Mexican representatives. "If it is accepted," he said, "the conference will come to an end because its object will have been accomplished. All questions with which we are concerned here will have been dealt with. This is more than a hopeful sign; it is very encouraging sign."

Justice Lamar greeted with a laugh a suggestion that the American proposals submitted today were in substance an ultimatum to the Huerta government. "They are merely our ideas as to which we await an answer from the Mexican delegates," he said.

That the Mexicans will agree to the American proposals at once is not considered possible. At least a week of further parley is anticipated from the fact that general Huerta has yielded slowly on all points of dispute since the negotiations began. He will be given the terms of President Wilson's plan of settlement in a code message and will consult his Cabinet tonight in Mexico City. He may send his preliminary rounment tomorrow, but the American delegates are prepared for some delay before getting the definite answer from Mexico City.

The Mexican delegates issued a statement this afternoon that they had advised President Huerta to call off the Tampico blockade.

Three Victories for United States in Mediation Plan

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 8.—Three important victories have been won by the United States in connection with the mediation proceedings. They are:

1—Huerta has withdrawn his refusal of a pledge to quit the presidency.

2—Huerta has remained a party to the negotiations despite the ignoring of his demand that a bi-partisan provisional government be chosen to succeed him.

3—Huerta has back down in regard to the Tampico blockade.

Only one more victory is needed by the United States to make mediation a success. It is the agreement to an armistice by General Carranza.

30 SHIPS LOST IN BLIZZARD

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 8.—More than thirty fishing vessels have been sunk off the coast of New Brunswick, or are missing, as a result of a terrific storm that has been raging for more than twenty-four hours. It is feared that more than 100 men have lost their lives. The coast is strewn with wreckage north of Miramichi bay.

According to advices received from Charlottetown, P. E. I., and points on the north coast of New Brunswick, the fishing fleet was caught in a blizzard driven by a terrific gale. Some of the boats were blown out to sea, but many were driven upon the reefs along the shore.

This is the first time in twenty years that a blizzard of so great a force has swept the New Brunswick coast, though snow flurries often occur much later over the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

At least thirty fishermen are known to have perished. As fast as the bodies are recivered they are taken to Caraquet, on Chaleur Bay. Most of the boats lost were wrecked on Shippegan and Miscou Islands.

U.S. Vera Cruz Fleet Adopted American's Cartoon Names

From the New York Evening Sun.

VERA CRUZ, June 4.—The good ships Piffle and Grape Juice were retired from the Atlantic fleet by Rear Admiral Badger today. When the navy captured Vera Cruz two small tugs were seized as part of the harbor equipment. The sailors christened them Piffle and Grape Juice, as a joke, and the names stuck to the craft.

When hailed by officers of the deck on other ships with "What ship is that?" the crews would give the burlesque names, replying, "The tug Piffle" or "The tug Grape Juice." The names even began to appear on the logs of various ships. Both the tugs were sent to the drydock for painting and repairs.

Meanwhile reports of the popular christening had reached the ears of Rear-Admiral Badger and he ordered a discontinuance of the joke, especially because the names were appearing in the logs. New names are being sought for the tugs.

Shower Bath for Tunnel Passengers

Just about the time the mercury was reaching for the 80 mark today passengers on a tunnel car got an unexpected relief. Their open car, crossing from East Boston to Scollay square, shot through a veritable shower bath. It developed that workmen had mistakenly turned on a disconnected pipe in a duct in the roof of the tunnel.

Too Many Lawyers on Harvard Board

Walter Prichard Eaton, dramatic critic and magazine writer, expresses himself forcibly in an article in the current number of the Harvard Alumni Bulletin against overseers of Harvard University being chosen mostly from men who live in Boston and New York. Another objection cited is that nearly all of the directors are lawyers.

Buffum Abduction Case Is Dismissed

For lack of evidence, the complaint against Eustis E. Buffum, twenty-five, who was accused of taking from her father's home Dorothy G. Stillman, a pretty girl of seventeen years, was dismissed in Salem Court today and the man discharged. Buffum and the girl were arrested in Franklin. Buffum had been a boarder at the Stillman home, No. 5 Mall street, Salem.

$10,000 Fire Loss in Pawtucket, R. I.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., June 8.—Fire today destroyed the storehouse and contents of the Pawtucket Produce Company, owned principally by Joseph C. Condon. Sparks from the locomotive are said to have caused the fire. The loss is estimated at between $10,000 and $12,000.

Albanian Rebels Are Annihilated

DURAZZO, Albania, June 8.—A heavy force of Albanian rebels which was preparing to march upon this city, the capital, has been destroyed by government troops near Tirana, according to word received from the scene of battle today.

Woman Lodger Is Found Dead in Bed

Miss Lydia Quirk of Providence who has sued F. F. Roche for $50,000 in breach of promise case.

M'GUANES BOTH FILE APPEALS IN FAMILY WAR

An appeal has been entered in Norfolk Superior Court by James A. McGuane of Brookline from a Probate Court decision by Judge James H. Flint, ordering McGuane to pay his wife $100 and $22.50 a week for the separate support of Mrs. Laura Lamport McGuane and two of the three children given in her custody.

Mrs. McGuane has also filed an appeal from the decision. In her list of specifications she charges her husband called her names in the presence of her two children. Mrs. McGuane appeals from that part of the decision in which her seven-year-old son, Francis L., was awarded to his father, and that the amount awarded to her for the support of herself and two children, James A., four years old, and Aglie J., six months, is insufficient.

On May 25 a hearing was held before Judge Flint on a petition brought by Mrs. McGuane in which she charged her husband with cruel and abusive treatment. As decision was made on May 6.

Mr. McGuane's appeal is on the grounds that he did not and never has deserted his wife without justifiable cause, that the court erred in its decree in awarding his two youngest children to their mother, and that the amount ordered to be paid was excessive.

Rostand Refuses to Fight Bernhardt

PARIS, June 8.—Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who entered suit against Edmond Rostand because a poster of his play, "L'Aiglon," had been placed opposite her Paris theatre and had hurt her business, decided not to push the suit when Rostand refused to defend any actions brought by her. Rostand telegraphed her, "No human force could make me defend myself against you. I would rather cut off my right hand than engage a lawyer to fight you."

Youth "Clubbed" by Policeman Is Fined

Martin Gibbons of No. 151 Washington street, Hyde Park, was fined $10 in West Roxbury Court today on the charge of drunkenness. Gibbons is the young man who caused excitement in Forest Hill square on Saturday night while being arrested by Policemen Kilton and McDevitt. Gibbons said he did resist arrest, but was clubbed by the police. Kilton said he had to use his club to protect himself.

PROVIDENCE, June 8.—Frederick F. Roche of Cumberland, wealthy superintendent of the Manville Company cotton mills at Manville, the man who broke every known record for speed in Matrimonial Sweepstakes when he wooed and married within an hour a pretty German girl in New York last April, today defended himself against a $50,000 breach of promise suit filed against him in Superior Court here by Lydia F. Quirk of Providence. Roche declared there was no foundation for the suit.

Miss Quirk alleges that on May 11, 1912, the defendant proposed marriage and she promised to marry him. She alleges that just previous to April 1, 1914, he called upon her and told her that he was going to New York on business.

Then exi time she heard of him was when she read the account of his marriage in New York. She alleges that he gave her a diamond ring, entertained her divisbly and bought expensive gifts.

Mr. Roche is forty-seven. Mrs. Roche, who was Mrs. Lola Dithors of Berlin, Germany, is thirty-two. Both have been married before. Mrs. Roche has one son.

"Miss Quirk's charges are absurd and without foundation," said Roche: "I am not worrying."

Rapp's "Darling Beelee" Notes Read

CHICAGO, June 8.—The "Darling Beelee" letters which William Rapp, Jr., is alleged to have written to Mrs. Katherine E. Dean when half the width of the continent separated him from his "Dear Little Rascal" found the attention of a crowded courtroom when the Schumann-Heink divorce suit was resumed today. A dozen or more of the pen and ink love songs remained to be read.

Allan Mayer, attorney for the diva, admitted today that the desertion charges had practically been abandoned. By prosecuting his charge the complainant would have paved the way for the introduction by the defence of evidence citing instances of madame's temperamental fights.

Barrington Paints Up on the Sabbath

BARRINGTON, R. I. June 8.—People here are shingling houses, building hen coops and painting on Sunday. They say the ordinance reads, "no man shall follow his usual occupation on the Sabbath." Chief of police Robbins told the Council a bank clerk or broker was not following his "usual occupation" when he had overalls on daubing paint along the shingles near the roof.

Queen of Roumania's Opera Is Presented

VIENNA, June 8.—The new opera, "Marioara," written by the Queen of Roumania, better known as "Carmen Sylvia," was warmly received when played by the Vienna People's Opera. The critics were reserved as to the merits of the opera.

WOMAN CLAIMS NEW FIRE BILL TAMPERED WITH

Miss Louise Chapman Hotchkiss of the Back Bay, who is attempting to push through the Legislature a fire prevention bill for the protection of apartment houses, declares some one has tampered with the bill since it was first drafted.

The original bill makes it necessary for all apartment houses to be equipped with elevator sprinklers, but some one has taken this clause out of the bill.

Miss Hotchkiss asks:

"I would like to know who has dared rob the bill of that section which provides for the sprinkling of water down the shaft of a burning elevator and to make it possible for a tenant to breathe, while crawling out of a fire escape?

I have found that elevator sprinkler clause in the original bill has disappeared on the road from the Building Commissioner's office to the State House.

"How did it happen? I went to the Building Commissioner and asked. He looked solemn and said, "I do not know."

"Who does know, Mr. Commissioner?" I asked.

"I do not know."

"Q.—Would the Mayor know. A.—I think not.

"Q.—Would the Governor. A.—I think not.

"Q.—Would—would God know, Mr. Commissioner? A.—I'm not sure.

"I then went up to the State House and asked the men who parade the corridors with a badge on their vests to send the man to me who knew the most about the fire prevention bill. They all cried out together, as if the importance of this bill was the one thing in their minds. 'He's out to dinner. Please be seated in this room.'

"For a half hour I studied the carved legs of an enormous oak table. Then the door opened. The fire legislator entered.

"Here is the bill, Mr. n., I said, producing the document. How did it happen that the elevator sprinklers clause was left out. It was safe and sound in that bill down at the building department. It was the builders of Boston, I learned, who had influence enough to rob the bill of this clause.

"What is the good of the bill without this elevator sprinkler? We all know about the Melvin fire."

Montreal Mayor on Strike.

MONTREAL, June 8.—Mederic Martin, recently elected Mayor of Montreal, refused to attend a meeting of the Board of Control until he received $325 due, he says, as his salary.

Three Women Hurt as Car in Allston Jumps from Track

Three women were injured and several persons were shaken up when an outward bound Auburndale car left the rails on Commonwealth avenue, near Allston street, Allston, and after plowing across the reservation, came to a stop by crashing into a telegraph pole.

All the passengers were thrown from their seats and some were tossed from the car. Mrs. Mary Kelly of No. 145 Woodland road, Auburndale, is suffering from shock; Elizabeth Barry of No. 949 Centre street, Newton, received injuries to her left leg and is suffering from shock, and Miss Ellen Smith of No. 34 Westbourne road, Newton Centre, received similar injuries.

Walsh Goes to Aid Work for Orphans

NEW BEDFORD, June 8.—A parade in honor of Governor Walsh, who is coming here tonight to attend the opening rally of the $60,000 campaign to be raised within a month for the St. Mary's Home for Orphans, will be held tonight. In the parade there will be the Liberty and Monte Pio Guards, the Y. M. C. T. A., with fife and drum corps and Divisions 7, 9 and 12, A. O. H., also the Knights of Columbus and detachments from the Coast Artillery Corps and Naval Brigade.

Saugus Baby Dead from 25 Tablets

Eighteen-months-old Dorothy Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Watson of No. 17 Appleton street, Saugus, while playing in her father's bedroom came upon twenty-five laxative lozenges. So she ate every one of them. Her parents found her in convulsions. She died while being taken to Union Hospital at Lynn.

Four Hurt as Auto Hits Waltham Car

Mrs. Margaret Frost of Lynn was seriously injured and another woman and two men hurt when an automobile in which they were riding collided with an electric car at Maple and Moody streets, Waltham. Mrs. Frost suffered several broken bones. The others hurt were Benjamin A. Atkinson of Chicago, Charles T. Donahue and his mother Nora, of No. 123 Washington street, Wellesley Hills.

PLAN DEBATE OF RACE PROBLEMS AT CONFERENCE

Plans are complete and 450 invitations have just been issued for the eighth annual Sagamore Sociological Conference to be held at Sagamore Beach June 30 and July 1 and 2. George W. Coleman of the Boston City Council is president of the conference, Arthur J. Crockett of "The Modern Priscilla" is secretary and the Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis is historian.

The general subject this year is "Race Problems, with Special Reference to the Negro, the Asiatic and the Jew." Henry Gideon, organist and choir master of Temple Israel, Boston, and Mrs. Constance Ramsay Gideon of Pachesham Park, Surrey, England, will open the first session by singing folk songs of various races.

The hosts of the conference are George W. Coleman, John D. Adams, Lincoln House, Boston; B. Preston Clark, Boston, Arthur J. Crockett, Mrs. Glendower Evans, Boston, the Rev. James A. Francis, D. D. of Clarendon Street Baptist Church; Professor Edward S. Hawes, Ph.D., of Brooklyn; H. H. Lathrop, treasurer United Society of Christian Endeavor; Dr. J. Father Schrimer of Needham, Miss Cornelia Warren of Waltham and Mrs. Edward P. Williams of Greenwich, Ct.

The program will be: "Is Race Antipathy Rational?" — Professor Daniel Evans, D. D., of Andover Theological Seminary.

"What the Negro Wants." — Rev. William N. DeBerry, a colored minister of Springfield.

"What We Can Do for the Negro." —Rev. B. F. Riley, D. D., LL. D., of Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Riley is a white preacher in the South. He is the author of "The White Man's Burden."

"The Asiatic in the United States." —Rev. William Elliot Griffis, D. D., LL. H. D., of Ithaca, New York, once a missionary in Japan.

Discussion led by Peter Clark Macfarlane, author of "Everyday Americans."

Reading: "The Crucible," Robert Haven Schauffler, poet and musician.

"Has Race Anything to Do With the Prejudice Against the Jew?" — Professor Nathaniel Schmidt of Cornell.

On July 3, the day after the conference, there will be held the first of what may become annual conferences on the subject of "Open Forums." Under the leadership of Mr. Coleman, director of the Ford Hall meetings, the leaders of present and prospective plans will discuss ways and means for the advancement of the open forum idea.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Six chairmen of the highway commissions of the several New England States and the Governor of New Hampshire, have been invited to attend the mid-Summer meeting of the American Automobile Association, to be held at the Hotel Maplewood, Bethlehem, N. H., which gathering will cover the Fourth of July period and will include a good roads convention on the afternoon of July 6.

Chairman Lewis R. Speare of Hinsdale, head of the committee having the meet in charge, has extended invitations to Governor S. D. Felker of New Hampshire, and also to S. Percy Hooker, of the Granite State Highway Department, and to Highway Commissioner W. D. Sohier, of Massachusetts; Charles C. Gates, of Vermont, Lyman H. Nelson, of Maine; Charles J. Bennett, of Connecticut, and Robert R. Treat, of Rhode Island, all of whom have been asked to deliver addresses with particular reference to highways improvement in their respective States. Besides the chairman, all members of the highway commissions have also been invited to be present. Paul D. Sargent, engineer of the Maine commission, has been asked to give one of his comprehensive talks. Mr. Sargent was formerly acting director of the United States Office of Public Roads.

When outside wear or inside break in the fabric due to bruise produces a comparative weak place in a casing, the inside pressure causes a bulge in the location of the weak spot, and this part is then exposed to more wear in travel than the sound parts of the casing. Of course the blowout quickly follows. Strong interliners prevent this bulging making a slight depression at the worn spot in place of a bulge, and thus preventing excessive wear on the weak portion of the casing.

SUIT TO RECOVER LOOT BACKED BY THE PEOPLE

The amount of the suit is expected to be about $125,000,000. The legal principle on which it is brought is this:

A director, under recent decisions, is a trustee.

A trustee is personally responsible for the transactions under his trusteeship.

A trustee must not illegally invest the funds under his care.

If he does the court will force him to buy up those investments himself.

The New Haven directors illegally invested in competing roads and trolley lines.

These illegal investments brought a heavy loss upon the road.

Just as if they were trustees, the directors can be forced to take up those illegal investments and stand the loss.

"Will the directors of the Boston & Maine, or its stockholders, also sue for losses of the Boston & Maine under New Haven management?" Attorney Whipple was asked.

"Such a suit has not been considered. I think, however, that the same principles apply to their case as to the small stockholders in the New Haven itself. Indeed," Mr. Whipple replied, "with our laws becoming more stringent all the time and with the directors robbing the public, the railroads have a pretty small show, just now."

Precedent for the suit has been found in New York, where, in 1910, the directors of the Traction Trust were ordered by the courts to restore to the stockholders $6,000,000 they were found to have improperly expended.

Among expressions of opinion on the suit today were:

FORMER MAYOR JOHN F. FITZGERALD:

I believe some good might result from such a suit and that it would tend to build up the New England railroad situation, which everyone knows is in such a sickly condition at the present time as a result of the laxity of these New Haven directors. I am sure that if this suit is an honest movement on the part of sincere men to build up the railroad situation it is certainly all right, but, on the other hand, if it is not a sincere movement it is going to hurt New England.

FREDERICK P. FISH of Brookline, a director of many educational and banking corporations:

This proposed suit is a very serious proceeding and ought to bring about the desired results.

ROGER BABSON of Wellesley, a director of many banking institutions:

I believe this suit is a step in the right direction. I do not believe the suit will compel these directors to give up any money, but I am sure it will force them to give up voluntarily something which they would not have given up otherwise. It is not doubted that there has been much laxity on the part of these directors.

Although this suit might not enable the stockholders to collect much damages, nevertheless, it ought to compel these directors to give up certain contracts which would be to the railroad's advantage. By these contracts, I mean contracts for the supply of coal, express contracts, contracts relative to the guarantee of certain securities, all of which contracts are of the present time proving profitable to the directors and unprofitable to the stockholders.

The suit will be the only means that the stockholders have of forcing these directors to give up these contracts and if it accomplishes this, it certainly will have accomplished a great deal.

MAYOR CURLEY:

This proposed suit is the best step that has been taken thus far, but I believe that they could go big prices for holdings that were not worth one-half of what they paid, it was their own lookout. If any one was to lose it should be the director and not the poor public.

"A New York syndicate has been quietly picking up New Haven stock at low prices whenever it could. The reduction in price has been tremendous.

Some day the laws of the State are going to compel this business to run as it should. When that happens this stock will be worth a great deal of money and will greatly enrich these people who are now buying it.

"The New York, New Haven & Hartford was organized to run a steam road, not trolley lines.

"If the directors of the railroad have, in order to stifle competition, bought at high prices the stocks of trolley lines, and if these stocks are shown to be worthless, the directors are the ones who should have to stand the loss, for their own illegal conduct," a little farther by having all persons who have lost relatives in the many train wrecks of the New Haven, which last year exceeded those of any railroad in the country, bring suits for damages.

Mr. Whipple today explained at some length his legal ground work for the proposed suit.

"MAKE THEM PAY."

"Directors of railroads are like trustees of an estate," said Attorney Whipple. "If they make purchases which they should not have made, they ought to be compelled to make good.

"If they have wrongfully expended money it is up to the courts to make them put it back. If they have paid just as well go ahead with their proceedings without awaiting any further promises or any definite action by the Department of Justice. We know there is no intention on the part of the Attorney-General to bring suit either criminally or civilly on behalf of the stockholders against the men who have been shown up as the wreckers of the New Haven system.

When the Attorney-General complained of the inquiry by the Interstate Commerce Commission, following his published letter in which he intimated that that inquiry might interfere with any proceedings the department might have in view, we had a talk with him. I assured him that if he would show me that he had any criminal or other proceedings in contemplation I would do all I could to hold the further inquiry in abeyance. I was told without equivocation that proceedings against the officers of the New Haven were not contemplated.

WOULD RESTORE CONFIDENCE.

"For that reason I say I am glad this suit is now being prepared. The stockholders are entitled to this protection and I cannot see how it can interfere with a satisfactory reorganization of the New Haven road. The policy of some people seem to be that in order to have a proper reorganization all the evil that has been done in connection with this great system must be covered up.

"The only way, in my judgment, to obtain an honest reorganization, one in which the people will have confidence, is to uncover and throw the glare of publicity upon the wrongs that have been done and fight for restitution. The men who do that will have the confidence of the country behind them, and the New York, New Haven & Hartford will start in upon a new era that will ultimately lead to a return to its former proud position in the railway world."

The Department of Justice is silent on the subject. It failed to bring suit to test the liability of the directors, although requested to do so, and has passed up to the stockholders, who in final shape.

PUSH NEW ENGLAND SUIT, URGES NORRIS

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Senator Norris of Nebraska, author of the resolution under which the Interstate Commission Commission is conducting its inquiry into the affairs of the New Haven Railroad, expressed his best satisfaction over the suit to recover $125,000,000 from the personal fortunes of the Morgan-Rockefeller-Baker group of directors —money that was looted from the lines during the years of their domination.

"A civil suit to recover the millions of which the stockholders of the New Haven road have been robbed is something that I have been expecting for some time," said Senator Norris. "When I offered the resolution adopted by the Senate and under which the Commerce Commission made its inquiry, I inserted a clause that provided for the development of evidence that would be of assistance in this very proceeding.

"My own opinion is that the railroad itself should have brought the suit against these directors who put through the deals from which the road suffered. I believe it would have been a good thing for a receiver to have been appointed. Before I ordered my resolution, and when some of the interested parties from New England conferred with me I told them I thought they were mistaken in their fears about the results that would come from the appointment of a receiver.

WORK FOR RECEIVER.

"A receiver, as the officer of the court, would have cared for the property and one of his first acts, under the guidance of the court, would have been proceedings against the robbers and the recovery of as much of the money as possible.

"The New England people might

WASHINGTON, June 8.—President Wilson does not expect that the Jones measure for Philippine independence will be passed at this session of Congress, but will ask about it when he has conferred with a number of conscientious directors and looters, in the right direction.

Are You Suffering From Auto-Intoxication?

The dictionary says that Auto-Intoxication is "poisoning, or poisoned condition of the state of being poisoned, from toxic substances produced within the body." This is a condition due to the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver, or pores of the body failing to throw off the poisons. More than 50% of adults are suffering from this trouble. This is probably why you are suffering from nervousness, headaches, loss of appetite, lack of ambition, and many other symptoms produced by Auto-Intoxication. Your whole system needs stirring up.

RATES TOO LOW, SAYS ELLIOTT

Howard Elliott, chairman of the New Haven directors, appeared today before the legislative Committee on Railroads which has taken up the Governor's message urging ratification of the agreement for the separation of New Haven and Boston & Maine. George W. Anderson was present from the Public Service Corporation. William H. Coolidge as attorney for the Boston & Maine and other prominent railroad men.

Mr. Elliott reviewed the problems he faced when he came to take charge of the New Haven, and reiterated his determination to obey the laws. He said:

"But I found a very difficult and possibly insurmountable social problem, and that led me to open negotiations with the Department of Justice."

He told how these negotiations led to the agreement upon a method of separation of the two roads, and he said: "The government claims that control of both New Haven of certain railroad, trolley and steamship properties constitutes a monopoly within the meaning of the law. The New Haven, while not admitting that the contention is sound, agreed to the plan of the Attorney-General.

He then went on to urge the passage of legislation to make this agreement possible of fulfilment, and continued to urge still further measures of relief to the roads. He said: "Conditions have changed in the past few years." He told how a decrease in freight earnings and an increase in wages have taken $4,352,600 from the Boston & Maine in 1913, as compared with 1903. He quoted Governor Walsh: "Great care must be taken not to impose too many burdens on the tottering railroads, or they may fall entirely."

Mr. Elliott declared freight and passenger rates are too low and should be raised. He urged legislation to make possible a broad plan for financing the roads, and pleaded for co-operation to save the 60,0000 stockholders and the 30,000 employes from hardship.

MISS SHUMWAY TO BE QUEEN OF THE MAY AT WELLESLEY PAGEANT

Alice Shumway, freshman class president and Queen of the May at Wellesley this year, will tomorrow evening be Queen of the Fairies in the Floral Night pageant, the final lake spectacle of the Wellesley College year.

There will be several innovations in the program this year. Heretofore there has been a procession of canoes, decked in symbolic garlands. Two years ago two canoes, side by side, bore a platform upon which stood a girl posed as the Statue of Liberty.

This year the first spectacle will be "Fairyland," and the canoes and their lanterns, and the girls in dainty costumes will present a dream-like spectacle.

Miss Shumway, as Queen of the Fairies, will ride in a float drawn by two swan boats. She will also christen the freshman shell.

Afterwards the four class crews will form a "W." Then the class and college crews will form a five-pointed star. Afterwards the cup will be presented to the champion oarswoman of the college. Then comes the singing of crew songs, and finally a fireworks display on Waban.

Miss Marian Quimby, '14, of Springfield is chairman of Float Night committee, with Misses Eunice Wood, '15, of Brookline, N. Y., and Jean Farley, '15, of Sedalia, Mo., as assistants. Miss Pauline Ehrich, '15, of New York, is chairman of the pageant committee.

Yale Physician Gives Blood to Save Older Professor

NEW HAVEN, June 8.—Transfusion of blood, voluntarily given by a brother physician of this city, may save the life of Dr. Otto U. Nancy of the Yale medical school, who has been critically ill with pneumonia for several days.

Dr. R. H. Moore, a young physician of this city and Yale graduate, gave about one-quarter of all his blood to the older Yale professor and a slight improvement has been noted. Dr. Moore is very weak.

New Monument for Boston Missionary

A monument will be shipped next week from Boston to Amherst, Burmah, to take the place of the one first erected in 1829, to the memory of Ann Hasseltine Judson, wife of the first missionary to go to that country. The monument is sent by the American Baptist Missionary Society at this city. It is of finest black slate, measuring two and one-half feet wide, three inches thick, and four and one-half feet above the level of the granite base.

Mrs. Judson left Boston in 1812 for Burmah, where she was persecuted for her religious beliefs. She died there in 1819.

Orangemen Predict Victory in Ulster

Orangemen of Greater Boston paraded and attended special services at Tremont Temple. The Rev. John Blair of the Clarendon Street Baptist Church prophesied a victory for the Ulsterites within a short time.

"I believe the day is not far distant," he said, "when Ulster will be the seat of the Government in Ireland."

Hub Book Claimed to Antedate Darwin Hoax on Scientists

Inquiries in Boston and London have developed that a pamphlet that came to light in the latter city last year, purporting to contain "an anticipation of the Darwinian theory," was a hoax and antiquarians are now trying to establish who the joker was. The title of the pamphlet was:

SHAL. WE HAVE COMMON SENSE?
Sella
Recent Lectures
Written and Delivered by
GEO. W. SLEETER,
Boston.
Wm. BENSE, Printer, 1840.

Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, who died last November, sent the pamphlet to Professor E. B. Poulton in London, saying he had received it from "an American friend." For several months the work was accepted as genuine. One point was against the authenticity of the pamphlet; at the back of the title is a statement of registration in the District Court of Massachusetts. The registry was searched but no entry was to be found.

Then printing undoubtedly done by Bense of Boston was compared with the printing of the pamphlet. The comparison gave strong evidence that the booklet was not printed by Bense.

FAILS TO SEE HELP IN TOLLS AMENDMENT

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The administration and the proponents of repeal of the tolls exemption clause of the Panama Act have been compelled to accept an amendment that will preserve the American canal so far as Great Britain is concerned. The administration still is determined, however, that the transcontinental railroads of the country and Canada shall receive the valuable concessions that will go to them through the imposition of tolls on coastwise shipping.

Representative Hinebaugh, Illinois, Chairman of the House Progressive Congressional Committee said today:

"I cannot see where the proposed Senate compromise tolls amendment helps the situation. Advocates of free tolls for American ships using the Panama Canal urged as an advantage of this law that it would serve to reduce the high freight transportation charges of the transcontinental road lines.

"Repeal of the law, even though the claims of sovereignty are not waived, will be to the advantage of the railroads in enabling them to maintain their rates without fear of the canal water competition.

"Other features of the proposed compromise, including the sovereignty proclamation, I would like to study before expressing an opinion."

Emboldened by the concessions wrung from the regulars Saturday, the opponents of the President's policy, aided and abetted by Democrats who have lined up in favor of the exemption of American shipping, are ready to press for further demands, believing they have the opposition fairly on the run.

That the Norris amendment does not alter the character or effect of the repeal bills is the belief of President Wilson. He told his visitors that he did not think the amendment was necessary, since it is impossible to alter the terms of the treaty through legislation.

The President declined to state, however, whether the bill would be satisfactory with the Norris amendment attached.

SIMMONS GIRLS TO HAVE SENIOR DANCE TONIGHT

Simmons College commencement week, with its joys to the many "sweet girl graduates," is in full swing. Today is the day of the senior dance for the 126 girls who graduate and a host of friends and classmates. The dance takes place at No. 521 Brookline avenue tonight.

Tomorrow class day exercises begin on the campus; the seniors will give the juniors their caps and gowns; the class ivy will be planted. Wednesday is Commencement Day. Thursday is the day of the senior luncheon.

Among the girls who will play a notable part in the week's activities are the following seniors: Miss Anita Clark, Miss Constance G. Rice, friend, Miss Gertrude A. Musser, Miss Eva S. Bassett and Miss Marjory Tainter.

The president of the senior class is Ava S. Bassett of Taunton. She is acknowledged in the Microcosm as the "best natured" girl in the class. The "funniest girl" in the senior class, according to Microcosm, is the vice-president, Margaret A. Potter of Sharon.

Anita Q. Clark of Hartford, popularly called "Nita," is in the Mudsill Club and was chairman of the floor committee at the junior prom.

Ruth B. Klein of Natick is senior treasurer. She and Mary McHory of Fort Henry, N. Y., the business manager of Microcosm, were awarded a tie vote as the "biggest nuisances."

"Prettiest girl" senior is Constance Eastaard of Bounton, N. J. She is one of the seven seniors who bring the college "S" in athletics. She is captain of the senior basketball team, president of the New Jersey Club and chairman of the senior faculty party.

Marjorie Parmey of Upper Montclair, N. J., was chairman of the sophomore luncheon and junior prom program committees.

Women Are Weakening

Emancipation Costly

Losing Their Beauty

Women are fast deteriorating physically, according to Dr. Louis Brocq, a noted French medical authority, in the Medical Bulletin.

"The physician attributes the deterioration to the exaggerated efforts of the gentler sex, both physical and mental, toward what they call their "emancipation."

He declares the shoulders of feminists are taking on a droop, their chests are becoming hollow and their faces are becoming less beautiful.

Dr. Brocq also declares married women have a better chance of attaining beauty than their single sisters.

Oppose Nathan, But Church Won't Ban Fair, Says Lavelle

NEW YORK, June 8.—Monsignor Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral and vicar-general of the New York diocese of the Catholic Church, stated positively that the church would pass no boycott against the San Francisco Exposition.

"The whole contention," said Monsignor Lavelle to the American, "hinges upon the appointment of Ernesto Nathan, former Mayor of Rome, as Royal Commissioner to take charge of Italy's exhibit in San Francisco.

"The appointment of this man, to put it mildly, was a thing which our church never desired. Italy is a Catholic country, and this faith has known no more bitter enemy than Signor Nathan. His appointment was an insult to the Catholics in this country. We should not have objected to a non-Catholic, but were disappointed to see such an opponent appointed.

"So far as an official boycott against the exposition being declared, I can say positively that there will be none. The Catholic Church does not do things that way."

Forty-four horses unfit for work were taken by the league veterinarian and twenty-two horses were cared for at Pine Ridge Home of Rest, Dedham.

FOLK STARTS INQUIRY ON SLUSH FUND

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Joseph W. Folk, chief counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will go to New York tomorrow with the names of witnesses to learn the extent of their knowledge bearing on the story in the Boston AMERICAN of last Friday, regarding a "slush fund" of more than $1,000,000 paid to officials in the Westchester franchise deal.

Mr. Folk is determined that William Rockefeller shall except for some good reason, go on the witness stand and tell what he knows concerning the New Haven looting.

Rockefeller's attorney, John A. Carver, declared before the commission that it would probably mean the death of his client to undergo a severe oral examination in his present state of poor health, but Folk is "from Missouri" as to Carver's assertions.

Mission Children of Far East Wed

Born in the missions of China and India, Olive Orrell Mason and Archibald Guiness Adams were married last night in Newton Centre. Today they are on their honeymoon, and in the Fall they will go to the Far East to take up mission work.

Young Adams was graduated Thursday from the Newton Theological Seminary. Miss Mason was with him receive his degree. They were married at the home of the bride's father, the Rev. Marcus C. Mason, No. 24 Pelham street, Newton Centre.

The Rev. Emory Hunt, secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, performed the ceremony. Harold Adams, the bridegroom's brother, was best man, and the maid of honor was Marion Vem of Malden.

The bride was born in Nhippo, East China, and the bridegroom in Tura Assam, India.

PEASLEE'S SAFE IS OPENED IN HUNT FOR WILL

HENNIKER, N. H., June 8.—The safe of Howard W. Peaslee, who was shot to death three weeks ago, was opened here today. Officials of the county superintended the opening. It was not announced whether Peaslee's will was found.

The combination of the safe had been secured from the safe company, and Edward Colby of Franklin, a friend of the murdered man, opened the strong box. County Solicitor Robert Murchie, Attorney George Hill, Chairman of Selectmen George Connelly and Chief Inspector Clifford Dildreth of Manchester watched the work.

The town was stirred today by news of the suicide of Arthur Connor, a young Henniker farmer. He had been in ill health, and took Paris Green. His death had no connection with the murder, but it is the fourth violent death within a few months and makes Henniker literally a "Town of Tragedy."

WORK ON PAPER CLEW.

Every paper mill and wholesale paper house in New England is being canvassed by the State authorities in search of the origin of the grade of paper on which was written the so-called "black-hand" vengeance note in the case.

The government feels the note is the crux of the case which is looked upon as the most baffling in a generation and the first homicide on record, hereabout, to involve a Quaker family.

Seventeen days of inquiry directed by triple interests, have effectually eliminated all but two suspects—"Silent" Gene Wood, the man locked up at the Concord jail, and another. The hasty arrest of Wood is deplored here. It is said to have aided the real assassin to cover his tracks. But the officials are doing their best to unravel the tangle and they do not attempt to conceal the fact that surprises are in store and another arrest imminent.

The vengeance note was written on a grade of paper a little thinner than cardboard. It has a faint pink tint and is of high quality. It is of a quality that the suspect under arrest would be unlikely to possess. It looks something like the cover of a writing pad, but is even somewhat thinner than that, yet heavier than foolscap.

"BLACK-HAND NOTE."

The death paper is about 6x7 inches and cut clean on all edges. It had been folded once. On it was printed in lead pencil this warning:

"Those who do crook work Beware."

The words were all printed and the well-formed letters credit the bad spelling and the purposely incorrect capitals. The whole intent was to disguise the hand that executed it and to give the impression that it was someone more ignorant and less skillful in the use of pen and pencil than the writer.

Attractive Investments in Outlying Business Property

The opportunity for making money on real estate is not given to the real estate dealer alone. The man of limited resources—a few hundred dollars—can make investments, temporary or permanent, in outlying business property. Such property—stores alone or shops under apartments bringing attractive rents—can be seen along the car lines and in the neighborhood business centers. Or you will find it listed by the most responsible real estate dealers in the classified and want ad pages of the Boston American, daily and Sunday.

If you control such property and the exigencies of business or the furtherance of investment plans make it necessary for you to sell, here is a suggestion. Put your offerings before the readers of the American. Its classified pages get the attention of the people you need to reach—people who have not only the inclination but the means to respond.

Boston's progressive real estate concerns advertise in the American and thus reach the city's readiest buyers.

MR. HEARST TELLS ATTITUDE ON CAMPAIGN

If There Are Not Candidates Whom I Can Conscientiously Support" He Says I Will Try to Organize an Independent Movement'

Declares Roosevelt Has Opportunity to Serve Country but Not by 'Indorsements of Roots, Lodges and Liveried Servants of Corporations"

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Brooklyn Standard Union printed yesterday the following interview with William Randolph Hearst:

These questions were submitted to Mr. Hearst:

"Are you a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senator?"

"What are your political plans?"

"Have you effected any political alliance with Governor Glynn as reported, for the coming State campaign?"

Mr. Hearst replied as follows:

"I am able to answer your three questions very quickly, but I am afraid not very interestingly.

"First, I am not a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator or for any other nomination for Senator, or for any office of any kind.

"Second, I have not any political plans.

"Third, I have not any political alliance.

"However, when I say that I have not any political plans I do not mean that I may not have political plans as politics crystallize and the situation develops.

"I don't think that I have ever run for an office because I wanted the office. I have run because I hoped to add whatever force I had to the advancement of some cause or crusade or else because I hoped to defeat some unfit candidate, or to oppose some evil political organization or combination.

It seems to me that a man goes into politics as he goes into war, contemplating the possibility of being elected in the one case or shot in the other, but having uppermost in his mind the object of defeating the enemy and doing his own duty as a citizen or a soldier.

"I hope there will be candidates in this Fall election whom I can support, in which case I shall support them more or less regardless of party affiliations.

"If there are not candidates whom I can conscientiously support I will try to organize an independent movement, and if desired will contribute my services in any capacity decided upon.

"I hope I shall be able to support some good man for Governor and some good man for Senator as I was able to support Mr. Mitchel for Mayor.

"However, with Mr. McCall nominated on the Democratic ticket, had another reactionary like Mr. McAneny been nominated on the fusion ticket I would myself have entered the lists for the mayoralty against them in order to have given some opportunity for the expression of the radical sentiment of the community.

"This Fall, I suppose, Mr. Root will be the Republican candidate for Senator.

"He is probably the most servile and sinister tool in America of the privileged interests, a man without patriotism or principle, a man in whom unscrupulousness is mistaken for cleverness and who for that reason has been retained by nearly every evil and disloyal interest from the time of Tweed and Tammany to this day of Carnegie and the Panama Canal.

"If there should be another gnarled and crooked root of the same reactionary corporation tree selected by the Democratic party I might be willing to make an independent canvass for the senatorship.

"It seems to me that the first duty of independent citizens, of loyal, patriotic citizens, of self-respecting citizenship is to endeavor to encompass the defeat of Root and men like Root.

"In order to clear the political field for the cultivation of a beneficial economic crop, it is necessary to uproot these old obstructionist stumps of privilege and special interest. They impede the plough of progress.

"If Mr. Roosevelt is willing to go himself or to attempt to lead his party into any combination to nominate Root, that alone should be enough to deprive him of the support of all genuine Progressives.

"It is a well-recognized fact that there are a number of men in the Democratic party who are not Democrats. One of them, the leader of the Democratic party, is now engaged in hurrying his unfortunate followers 'down a steep place into the sea.'

"In the same way it should be recognized that there are men in the Progressive party who are not at heart or in thought, or in action progressive. They are men who took advantage of the progressive movement to punish Taft for certain interference with their special interests and to reward Roosevelt for certain acts of political and financial complexion.

"Root is the candidate of these men of the element which may be called the Perkins-Progressives, an element which progresses one step forward and two steps backward with a long sidestep always in the direction of its own selfish interest.

"Root, I say, is the candidate of the old guard of the Republican party and of the commissary department of the Progressive party.

"Root must also be the candidate of Mr. Roosevelt if Mr. Roosevelt is to be the candidate of these financial elements.

"But to my mind Mr. Roosevelt would be the stronger if he were not the candidate of these financial elements. Mr. Roosevelt cannot afford to sacrifice too much of popular approval or popular delusion for the practical matter of a campaign fund.

"Mr. Roosevelt must not allow the public to embark on the river of doubt, lest they reach too soon the sea of uncertainty and the shores of disillusionment and disappointment.

"I believe that the Progressives could form a coalition with the Republican party in a way to be of distinct benefit to the country, but not by the endorsement of any Roots or Lodges or such other liveried servants of the corporations.

"If the Progressives are sincere in their support of Progressive Republicanism, they cannot afford to support any candidates but Progressive Republicans.

"It would be ridiculous for Mr. Roosevelt to campaign against Penrose in Pennsylvania and to support Root in New York. By so doing Mr. Roosevelt would give color to the charges of insincerity and inconsistency which his enemies bring against him.

"Penrose is no worse than Root. As a matter of fact, he is not as bad. In his service of the corporations Penrose has not been willing to sacrifice the interests of his country, although he has not been quite so considerate of his countrymen.

"As between Jack Cade and Judas Iscariot there is something to be said in favor of Jack Cade.

"Mr. Roosevelt may render a distinct service by campaigning for Progressive Republicans, for the Republicanism of Lincoln, which was the democracy of Jefferson.

"If Mr. Roosevelt shall conscientiously support such men and such policies he will secure support from many Democrats who no longer find Jeffersonian democracy or any spirit of patriotic loyalty or any hope of national prosperity in the Democratic party."

J. ROTTENBERG, BOSTON BANKER, DIES SUDDENLY

Julius Rottenberg, the Salem street banker, died suddenly at his home at No. 8 Abbotsford street, Roxbury.

He was widely known in Boston banking circles, having organized the Paul Revere Trust Company, of which he was formerly the vicepresident. The trust company was first located in Mr. Rottenberg's Salem street offices, but later moved to Washington street.

He was connected with nearly all the well known Jewish charitable organizations of Greater Boston and his frequent contributions to their aid were always liberal.

He was an active officer of many of the most important Jewish institutions and, a week ago, was elected a director of the Home for Jewish Children, in which he has always been deeply interested.

He is survived by a widow and daughter. The burial will be in New York, where he formerly lived.

SHOWS HOW TO HAVE LIFE WORK, BE HOMEMATE

That it is possible to be a successful professional woman and a homemaker at one and the same time is the belief of Mrs. Jessica Finch Cosgrave, principal of the Finch School for Girls, in New York.

Without any white of domestic machinery Mrs. Cosgrave manages her twelve-room apartment, and it is no way interferes with her professional life. She said:

It is no unnecessary in this modern era for a woman who marries to give up her individuality or renounce her profession.

I employ a Japanese who serves in the capacity of both cook and butler. My maid acts as my housekeeper, and these are the only regular servants I keep. All the rest of the work is done by outside specialists.

The laundry is sent out, a window cleaning company looks out for the cleanly condition of the windows, and a vacuum cleaner eliminates much unnecessary help and on festive occasions an outside chef and assistants are called in.

I plan my week's work for the household Saturday mornings and as I practically know a week in advance what my social plans are, I am able to make out the menus for the week and plan the work for my house assistants.

Mrs. Cosgrave, who was married to John O'Hara Cosgrave last year, has a daughter by her former husband, teen, will be ready for Bryn Mawr when she will be but fifteen years old, a fact that Mrs. Cosgrave cites as showing that her daughter has lost nothing by her continuation of a professional life.

Personally, continued Mrs. Cosgrave, I am sure I have a more sympathetic view because of my dual activities. I enjoy the full pleasure of a home and am there long enough to vitalize it. Men do not give up their careers when they marry, and it does not seem quite fair to me that a professional woman should not reap her reward in the business world, also.

Applaud Firemen in Human Pyramid

A private vaudeville entertainment was staged by firemen who answered an alarm from the State street district early today. The ventilating flue of Cottrell's restaurant at No. 19 Exchange street caught fire. The building is five stories. Stenographers, clerks, lawyers and bankers watche dthe firemen climb to the roof, haul up a chemical extinguisher on a rope, climb a stanchion to the top o fthe ventilator and then form a human pyramid, the man on top playing the extinguisher down the flue. The stunt was received with applause.

EVEN THE SENATE WILL PROBABLY FAVOR PURE MILK FOR THE BABIES

The Massachusetts Senate should tomorrow overthrow the report of the committees on Agriculture and Public Health, sitting jointly, "leave to withdraw," on the petition of the Milk Consumers' Association for the "protection of the public health and promotion of the milk industry."

* * *

This is a bill, Senators, for the babies!

* * *

Last year 10,423 Massachusetts babies died in their first year. Probably half of these might have been saved.

* * *

The passage and enforcement of the Consumers' Clean Milk Bill will save thousands of lives and prevent much sickness and suffering.

* * *

Of every 1,000 children born in Massachusetts, 117 die in their first year.

* * *

Twenty-five per cent. of the little tubercular cripples owe their condition to tubercular milk.

* * *

The State Board of Health does not have the customary legal power to formulate and enforce dairy regulations.

* * *

There are no State Dairy Regulations in Massachusetts, and only by State Dairy Regulations can we effectively control the out-of-State dairies.

* * *

It is true that the Consumers' Clean Milk bill comes before the Senate with the black eye of an adverse committee report, but it wants to be remembered that the Joint Committee was one-half Agricultural and the other half Public Health.

* * *

There are some in the Legislature who believe that the combined opposition of the dairy interests to this bills is, to say the least, ill advised.

* * *

The Milk Bill the Senate is to consider tomorrow is a measure of preventive medicine. It means a reduction in doctors' and undertakers' bills.

* * *

It will reduce to a minimum the possibilities of milk-borne epidemics or typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria and septic sore throat, and, even more important, the infant deaths from unclean milk.

* * *

It ought to pass.

* * *

General Manager Howard Elliott of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company is about now taking his seat in the room of the committee on Railroads at the State House to give the Committee his best judgment on the question of separating the Boston & Maine Railroad from the New Haven.

* * *

Some of the "antis" at the State House have an amusing way of shaking their heads dolefully over giving up the "hold" the State now has on the Boston & Maine stock of the New Haven.

Not unusual State House conversation runs something like this:

* * *

Question, in my mind, whether we ought to surrender what little hold we've got on the Boston & Maine stock.

What hold have we got on it?

The Boston Holding Company body is the body holding the New Haven stock bought by the Massachusetts Trustees and held, as you know, for Massachusetts.

But under the Holding Company act the State has the right to buy it.

Do you want Massachusetts to buy a controlling interest in Boston & Maine? Governor Walsh, you know, recommends the purchase of the property, and on the petition of 50,000 voters, the ownership question may be submitted to the people.

I'm not sure that we are ready for that, but—

* * *

And so it goes.

* * *

Politicians and legislators are likely to be a genial lot—in the mass—and there ARE those at the State House who will tell you that what the New Haven REALLY wants will be apparent when the Committee on Railroads makes its report to the Legislature.

* * *

Meaning, perhaps, that a MAJORITY of the Railroad Committeemen are so conservative, so safe, and so sound that they will quite likely find themselves thinking in parallel lines with the railroad managers.

* * *

In addition to fourteen matters especially assigned for the week the Great Pussyfoots — otherwise the Forty Senators—still have twenty-nine matters "held upon the table."

* * *

Eight of the twenty-nine matters on the table in the Senate were LAID ON THE TABLE IN THE MONTH OF MARCH.

The laid-on-the-table "game," as it has been played in the Senate of 1914, is only a wee bit less scandalous than the 1913 Senate "game" of whispering a bill to death, killing it by voice vote, or standing vote, and refusing to go in record in a roll call.

* * *

Among the more important matters postponed from time to time by the Senate and APPARENTLY due to be disposed of this week are:

* * *

Bill to make lawful certain agreements between employers and employes and to LIMIT THE ISSUING OF INJUNCTIONS in certain cases. Sometimes called the "Anti-Injunction" bill. This bill has been passed by the House. It is on the Senate Calendar for WEDNESDAY.

* * *

"Railroad Penalty" bill, to provide for the punishment of officers and agents of railroad corporations for violating certain provisions of law. This bill has been before the Senate for weeks and weeks. It has already been toned down by the insertion of the word "wilfully." Now comes Senator Lombard Williams, with an amendment providing that "this act shall not apply in the case of stock or bonds of a noncompetitive corporation subscribed for, or taken or held by, a railroad corporation solely for investment. On the Senate Calendar for TOMORROW.

Wellesley Girls to Have 'Float Night'

The annual Wellesley College "Float Night" will be held tomorrow evening on Waban Lake, Wellesley. Scores of canoes and skiffs will be decorated and there will be a pageant of water floats representing "Fairyland." Miss Alice Shumway of Newton Centre, president of the freshman class, will be Queen of the Fairies. The committee in charge consists of Miss Mary Quimby, chairman; Miss Louise S. Wood, general arrangements, and Miss Pauline Ehrich, pageant arrangements.

Duggan Dies 'Broke' at State Hospital

Boston friends were surprised today to learn of the death of R. Augustus Duggan, former head of the Children's Health Fund, an organization that was under investigation some time ago by the District Attorney's office, who died penniless at the Boston State Hospital two weeks ago.

RED SOX FIGHT HARD TO MAKE IT THREE STRAIGHT OVER NAPS

CUP YACHTS IN 3-CORNERED GO WEDNESDAY

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The scene of the next series of yacht races between the cup defender Boston Yacht Resolute and Defiance, which will start for the first time this week, shifts from Long Island Sound, the place of fitful weather and hoodoos, to Sandy Hook.

The first race of this series starts on Wednesday morning under the auspices of the New York Yacht Club and the races will continue until Friday. These races will, for the first time, give the boats a chance to test the seagoing qualities.

The Defiance had her bottom wooden mast stepped yesterday at City Island, at the upper end of the Sound, and her sails which were recut in Boston, have arrived.

Everybody who has been at the races between the Vanitie and the Resolute now want to see just what the mahogany boat from Bath, Me., and backed with Boston money, can do with these two boats.

When anyone says Boston over here, most everybody gets out their map to find just where this yachting centre of the world is located.

BOSTON MEN BACK RESOLUTE.

Although somewhat embarrassing to a few Boston fans over here, their money is still good, and down at the Larchmont Yacht Club last Saturday night a number of Boston yachtsmen placed a bet of $200 even that Charles Frances Adams, 2d, would be the skipper of the next defender of the America cup.

Another way to say this is that the Resolute will be the selection of the New York Yacht Club to defend the cup.

While the Resolute and Vanitie have broken even with two wins each the past week, the work of the Vanitie in every race was a little more consistent.

The weather was so fluky that no one would be justified in betting a plugged nickel on what the regard of these races might mean in the way of selection.

J. P. Morgan and Cornelius Vanderbilt, two of the principal owners of the Resolute, had a small fortune on the Bristol boat and just what they thought of the result and the weather wouldn't hardly be fit for print.

MANY LIKE THE VANITIE.

A Brooklyn bookmaker has placed a bet of $1,000 to $800 for a number of New York men that the Resolute will be selected to defend the cup. Those are hardly the odds at present, however, and it is pretty hard work to get a bet one way or the other just now.

Another bet placed at the Larchmont Club Saturday night was that the Vanitie would take two out of three of the races at Sandy Hook, and $100 even was the money that was placed.

The bet is a broad one for the friend of the Vanitie has two boats to meet and defeat to get his money.

Captain Bill Dennis, the skipper of Vanitie, is wearing a smile that won't come off. He was ashore a month ago that this same little gray-haired professional made a remark to a group of yachtsmen at Hotel Nonquasset, Mass., that if he ever got the Vanitie into the water the world to things with her. He smiles when he says: "I told you so."

WHAT DENNIS HAS DONE.

This same little gray-haired fighter for all the chances has proven himself a wonderful handler of big boats.

He gave up one race to save two members of his crew that were in danger of losing their lives. He gave up another good position at the start to save running down a disabled power boat filled with women and children.

He didn't even acknowledge the praise that was given him by those that saw both of those acts. About all captain Bill Dennis is thinking about is to put Alexander S. Cochran's Vanitie across the line every race—winner.

The Defiance is losing ground every time among the experts as a possible defender of the America cup. This may be premature judgment and Boston men believe it is, for she hasn't even been given a chance to meet any one of the others in a race.

ADAMS A BOSTON PRODUCT.

Captain Selah B. Howell, the skipper of the Defiance, is fretting over the delay. Many men express themselves at the various yacht clubs as believing that Howell is just as good, if not better, than Dennis in the seagoing game.

If he is he must be a corker. Then again, Boston men here pride themselves on the back and straighten out their chests whenever Charlie Adams is mentioned, for here is a product of New England, treasurer of Harvard College, banker and descendant of two Presidents, who calls racing boats for fun and has already made the yachting fraternity sit up and take notice by his handling of the Resolute.

Other Boston men, Robert W. Emmons and John Parkinson, 2d, co-owners and directors of the Defiance racing career, are making plans for themselves in these

TEST NEW YACHT TODAY

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., June 8.—The Shamrock IV., Sir Thomas Lipton's cup challenger, will sail her first formal race today, meeting the 23-meter Shamrock on a 30-mile course in the Solent. The challenger will allow the old boat four minutes and 23 seconds.

The date for the departure of the new craft across the water has been fixed for July 15, which means that the challenger may not have more than a fortnight under sail in American waters before the international matches.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

UMPIRE BIGLER SAID THAT HE NEVER saw any young manager who used such good judgment with his pitchers as Charley Henry is using. "Nearly all young managers and many of the older ones wait too long to take a pitcher out," said the umpire. "Sometimes this is because they do not see when he is losing his grip, and sometimes it is because they are afraid of hurting his feelings. Henry seems to me to have a much better idea."

THE GIANTS HAD WON SIX CONSECUtive games when the Phillies broke in on them, but the Reds had won one more number, exclusive of a tie, when the Cardinals laid them low.

BIG SCHMIDT IS BEGINNING TO MAKE good in the National League. Although he is not considered one of the best first basemen in the National League, Schmidt is batting .300, and is considerably better than some players who are rated as stars.

RUCKER GINN, CAPTAIN OF THE UNIversity of Virginia baseball team, is considered one of the most promising pitchers in Dixie college circles. He has signed to play with the Nats.

CONNIE MACK HAS AN INDIAN BAT-tery in the field, and Chief Bender is one of the best pitchers in the league. Chief Meyers, the Indians' catcher, is a good one, too.

CONNIE'S YOUNG BEGINNERS ARE JOHNson and Graves. Joe Johnson, who is a fast boy, swings a fair stick. This one follows in the footsteps of Chief Bender.

WHILE ON THE SUBJECT OF BASEBALL did you ever stop to consider that there are at least eight players on every baseball team who have names of Scandinavian origin? Olson, Ericson, Nelson, Hansen, Bauer, Ostdiek, Ostermueller, Torgeson.

HUGH MCBRIDE IS PLAYING A WONDERful game at his station, and his hitting is a valuable factor in the Red victories.

EN SUE, THE CENTREFIELDER OF THE baseball nine of the Ohio University of Athens, Ohio, is batting his team to victory this season. He has played for two seasons without batting an error.

JOHN HUMMEL IS MAKING A FINE SUBstitute for Jake Daubert since the latter has been laid up with tonsilitis. He has been fielding the ball in old time style.

THE BALTIMORE FEDS APPEAR TO BE a better team at home than on the road.

THE PHILLIES MAY BE CRIPPLED BUT they still manage to slip one over the Giants once in a while. The Quaker City still claims Rube Marquard as a left hook.

NO PITCHING STAFF IN THE MAJOR leagues has had more hoots on balls than Jeff Pfeffer, Mule Watson, Pat Ragan and Lee Meadows, Cardinal hurlers, so far this season. Pfeffer has issued 39 passes in 67 innings, Watson has issued 37 in 67 innings, Ragan has issued 31 in 67 innings and Meadows has issued 30 in 67 innings. Pfeffer has issued three passes more than he has pitched innings.

THE WESTERN CLUBS MAY AS WELL be prepared to encounter as rough going in the championship as in any other city in the Eastern section of the National League. The Feds are in another batting league.

THE BALTIMORE FEDS HAVE BEEN playing better abroad so far as they went, on. They have been a bad enough for teams which finished the first half of the season in the first division. Baltimore has been playing good ball, and their third baseman, Bill Kelly, is a star. Three pitchers have been responsible for the Baltimore Feds' success. Claude Hendrix, Jack Quinn and Ben Tincup. Hendrix has won eight games, Quinn has won seven and Tincup has won six. Hendrix has been pitching good ball, but both have been touched for many hits.

CHARLES BIGBEE, JR., WHO IS NOW PITCHing baseball as an amateur, is said to be the best pitcher ever developed in Washington, D. C. He is said to be a better pitcher than Walter Johnson was when he broke into baseball. That certainly is not being stated too much.

THE FEELING WILL NOT DOWN IN Washington that the Senators have been robbed of the world's series next Fall. Stranger things have happened in baseball than Washington has come to be alone in feeling the "robbees" to Motorcyclist Killed.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Charles Baike of Los Angeles, Calif., a motorcycle racer, who won many races throughout the country, was killed when the cycle which he was riding at the rate of sixty miles an hour ran into a steam roller on an exhibition track. His neck was broken.

RED SOX FIGHT FOR THIRD WIN FROM NAPMEN

CLEVELAND, O., June 8.—Just why Boston fans in general and Manager Carrigan in particular should worry over the absence of the veteran Heinie Wagner from the Red Sox lineup is a mystery to the Cleveland fans who witnessed Saturday's and Sunday's games at Somers Park. Clevelanders have certainly taken a fancy to this Everett Scott person who is cavorting around short.

If there is anything this understudy for Wagner cannot do it has not cropped out in the two games here.

He has starred in every department of the grand old game, and it is the consensus of opinion that Wagner will have a tough time of it winning back his job.

Scott looks like a million dollar find to Sixth City fans and they would give anything to have him at short for the Naps, as this has been the big hole in the Cleveland lineup all season with Chapman on the hospital list with a broken leg.

It was Scott who was the biggest factor in Boston's 4-2 victory over the Naps in fourteen innings Saturday, and it was this same kid who furnished the punch in the first inning Sunday which put the Red Sox in position to win, 2-1.

That punch was a corking single to centre. Speaker was thrown out by Jamie, but Lewis and Janvrin got fluke hits through Turner which, with a double steal, netted two runs.

The Naps got one the first half of the first on a gift to Hartford, an infield out and Jackson's line single, scoring with Gardner in the first inning, sixteen Red Sox went down in order, twelve by the air route.

Janvrin got a sun single in the seventh only to be doubled up. Foster scratched a single in the eighth but was left. From the first up to the eighth Graney was the only Nap to reach first, he making two scratch singles.

In the eighth, Lelivelt, batting for O'Neill, singled, but was left.

Speaker got as near as third in the ninth on his infield single off Bowman. His steal paid off in a run that was marooned. Olson tripled in the Naps' half but to no avail.

The teams meet in the third game of their series today and Manager Carrigan declares he will fight hard to make it three straight.

Championship Shoot Held Here This Week

Thursday, Friday and Saturday are the dates for the fourth annual Massachusetts State amateur trapshooting championship over the Paleface traps at Wellington.

All the crack guns throughout the State will make an effort to supplant J. L. Snow, the present champion. Snow has been doing some remarkable shooting the past season, and present indications point to his making the field hustle to take the title away from him.

Wahl May Get Record.

CHICAGO, June 8.—A new "Big Nine" conference record in the high jump will be allowed Wahl of Wisconsin. Wahl topped the bar at 6 feet 1½ inches, but the mark was achieved after competition in the event had ended.

Johnson and Gainer Out

CLEVELAND, June 8.—Manager Carrigan sent Pitcher A. Rankin Johnson and First Baseman Del Gainer to Youngstown to be treated by Bonesetter Reese. Johnson's arm is bothering him, while Gainer is having trouble with one of his legs.

As Joe Wood and Leonard are also suffering with lame whips, Boston is rather badly off for hurlers just now.

Lynn Boat Clubs Renew Cup Races After Seven Years

The West Lynn Boat Club and the Farragut Boat Club, rival organizations of Lynn, have patched up their differences of seven years' standing and the races for the Frank P. Bennett Cup, will be revived this year, the first race to be rowed in Lynn Harbor Saturday afternoon, August 15.

The cup was put up in 1904 and races were held in that year and the three years following. In 1904 and 1905 Farragut was the winner, and in 1906 West Lynn.

In 1907 the referee gave the decision to Farragut on a foul, but West Lynn, which still had possession of the cup, refused to give it up.

The race will be, as previously, between eight-oar shells and over a course of a mile and one-half.

Members of the crews shall be amateurs and shall have been members of the club they represent for thirty days before the race.

James P. Fox, treasurer of the N. E. A. A., shall be referee and he shall decide whether the condition of the water is fit for the race.

BRAVES AFTER 50-50 BREAK WITH THE REDS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Taking the first game and making the Cincinnati Reds travel to grab the second battle the Boston Braves appear to have recovered somewhat from the misfortunes that trailed them on the recent Western trip. The game Friday was an indication of what the Braves possess when they get an even break in the game.

The week's card provides two more battles with Herzog's hopefuls and the entertainment of the luckless Pirates for the rest of the week.

If Boston can split the next two games with leads their showing will not be half bad, for there are few teams in the National League that have accomplished the 50-50 stunt with the Cincinnati crew.

Pittsburgh's run of hard luck is even worse than the fate the Braves have met since the season opened. The Pirates started out like a sure top-notch club and yet the team has been turned back day after day for the past two weeks.

Manager Clarke says he has a better ball team than he had last season. Certainly the loss of Hendrix to the Federals has been sorely felt in the Smoke Town and there are many who believe Clarke received the bad end of the big deal with the Cardinals.

With the Braves on their own grounds there is every reason to expect a vast improvement. They will have the benefit of morning practice and this end of the game will be looked after keenly by Manager Stallings.

The team lost too many games by one run in the West, which was due to nothing more than weak hitting.

It looks like Dick Crutcher against Babe Benton this afternoon.

Expert Says Lipton Boat Is Sluggish

LONDON, June 8.—The Daily Mail's yachting expert, in an article on the Shamrock IV., Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America cup, remarks that the yacht is rather sluggish in very light airs, and says he believes that, in view of the fact that this sort of weather is likely to be experienced in the races off Sandy Hook, Charles E. Nickerson, the designer, will give Shamrock IV. more sail and reduce her displacement by removing lead from her keel. The Daily Mail expert adds that in a stiff breeze the yacht looks like a certain winner.

You have heard of Alexander,
You have heard of Caesar, too,
Of Napoleon and the balance
Of that razzle-dazzle crew.

You have heard of Col. Goethals

Of Fitzsimmons and of Corbett
And their feats upon the jaw.

Yes, you know of all these heroes,
But the gent who gets the ace
Is Buck Herzog of the Red Legs,
Who is gumming up the race.

Catholic College Nines to Battle

Boston College will face Holy Cross in the big college game of the season for the local team at Fenway Park on June 15. The game should supply plenty of thrills as deep rivalry exists between the two institutions.

It is expected that a large attendance will turn out and many of Boston's prominent men will be in attendance. Governor Walsh and Mayor Curley have promised to be on hand.

Following the game many of the fans will take in the B. C. night at the "Pops" concert. Professor Leonard Whalen of the Boston College High School faculty is in charge of the special music. He has arranged a splendid program of popular music, while the Boston College Glee Club is down on the program for several numbers.

HARVARD CREW MEMBERS STEAL MARCH ON SUN

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 8.—After a day of rest the Harvard crew members were given an extra early call today and put to work before the sun was hardly up. The men showed the effects of their rest and Coach Wray seemed very well satisfied with their showing.

Sunday was a quiet one at camp and the members of the different crews took advantage of it. The members of the varsity crew were the guests of Robert F. Herrick on his yacht, the Gypsy, and they spent a most pleasant day.

The yacht was headed for Long Island Sound and on their arrival off Fisher's Island the members of the crew dropped overboard and disported themselves for a while.

Three members of the varsity squad remained hereabouts. Charles Schall spent the day with his parents, who are visiting in the east from their Kansas City home. Chandler put in the day at study.

The freshmen impressed the John Harvard into service and visited Ocean Beach, where they, too, enjoyed themselves in the deep for a short swim. They lunched at the Ocean View House.

Early in the day several members of the freshman crew raced over to the Yale quarters and after waiting for the Blue coxswain on duty to fall asleep, proceeded to paint up everything in sight. They had spent some little time in picking out the Yale quarters and there was no mistake about it this time.

By the time they were ready to leave the Yale guard woke up and he was threatened with a decorating and by the time he had let out a number of signals the Harvard boys were on their way to the quarters.

Cheape Hurt: May Be Out of Polo Games

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., June 8.— In the final practice game of the British polo challengers at Westbury, Captain Leslie St. George Cheape, one of the mainstays of the British team, was struck by a polo ball in the nose and has been withdrawn from the opening international match tomorrow.

The accident occurred at the opening of the sixth period while the ball was in the centre of the field, where it had been placed by the Englishmen.

Henry L. Phipps, one of the substitutes of the American team, who was playing on the four opposing the challengers, made a backhand stroke, taking the ball from the English players.

The ball came struck Cheape on the nose and he dropped from his horse to the field. He was taken to the clubhouse nearby for medical attention.

Should Captain Cheape be kept out of the international match tomorrow because of his injury, Lord Wimborne will in all likelihood fill the position.

Harvard Track Head to Run in England

Captain Barron of the Harvard track team will, according to present plans, be a competitor at the English track and field championships July 4. Barron, who was just beaten in the 440-yard run at the intercollegiate championships by Meredith of Penn, will enter for that event at London, as well as the 220-yard dash.

Other American athletes entered in various events at the big meet include Jim Patterson of Pennsylvania, J. J. Wendell of the N. Y. A. C., the former Wesleyan and intercollegiate hurdle champion; Potter, Yale hurdler; Homer Baker, the N. Y. A. C. middle-distance runner, and Harry Smith of the Chicago House, the A. A. U. two-mile champion.

Edward Brown to Coach St. Louis Crews

Edward J. Brown, who has accepted the position of coach of the Mound City Boat Club crews of St. Louis, will leave Wednesday and immediately commence to train his crews.

Brown, as coach at the Weld Boat Club at Harvard, has been of invaluable assistance in the development of Harvard rowing. The present season will be his second with the Mound City crews.

Frank Smith of Cambridge, who is coaching the St. Louis Rowing Club, expects to give Brown a terrific battle for topnotch honors in St. Louis this Summer.

Dr. Gale to Aid Baby Hygiene Director

The board of trustees of the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association have appointed Dr. Harold A. Gale assistant medical director of the association. During the past year the number of babies who have come to the milk station of the association have increased 50 per cent. over preceding years, and the increased medical work necessary has been more than Dr. Arthur A. Howard, the medical director, could carry along.

POLO GAME IS PUT OVER TILL NEXT SATURDAY

NEW YORK, June 8.—The first polo game between England and America for the international trophy, scheduled for tomorrow at Meadowbrook Club, was postponed until Saturday by the Polo Association today.

This action was taken following a report received from the physician that Captain Leslie St. C. Cheape, of the English team, stating he was in no condition to play until the latter part of the week.

"We have postponed the first match until Saturday out of courtesy to the English players," said Chairman H. L. Herbert of the Polo Association.

"Captain Cheape is one of England's best players. They would be badly crippled without him and his doctor tells us that one of his eyes is entirely closed as the result of being hit in the face with a ball in the practice yesterday."

Chairman Herbert said that decision would be made later in the day, as to just when the game will be played. The original program called for a game tomorrow and the second game on Saturday. The regular Saturday game probably will be played on Wednesday or Thursday of next week, as it is necessary to give the ponies at least four days of rest between games.

It was thought earlier in the day that Captain Cheape's injury was of such a nature that it would not keep him out of the game, but an examination made at noon by Dr. John E. Lanehart of Hempstead, N. Y., revealed the fact that Captain Cheape could not get into the game tomorrow.

Captain Cheape, who plays at No. 2, is regarded as one of the best polo players that England ever produced. He is fearless and wonderful rider, has an unerring aim with the mallet and it was on his great playing that England mainly relied for victory.

Kramer Is Winner in Big Bike Race

NEW YORK, June 8.—Frank Kramer, the American champion, was the cycling classic of America, the Grand Prize of Newark Boal, at the Newark Velodrome.

Kramer won two out the three heats at one mile, his opponents in the final being Alfred Goullet and Robert Spears, both Australians.

Frank Cavanaugh completed the American triumph of the afternoon by defeating Alfred Grenada of Australia in a special match race at two-thirds of a mile in straight heats. Cavanaugh won from the tall Texan in a long march.

Frank Cavanaugh and Fred Hill were the winners of the five-mile professional handicap, Rutt and Fogler, the scratch team, having the misfortune to puncture on the last lap.

Richards Will Try Big Channel Swim

Sam Richards, the long-distance swimmer, is going over to Europe this Summer to make an attempt to swim the English Channel, if the plans of the L. Street Swimming Club go through.

With this idea in view they held a meeting at the baths and voted to hold another meeting in Maynard Hall on June 15 for the start of a campaign to raise money to finance the sending of the swimmer away. Richards, with Gus Wise and Dr. Keesler, gave a five-mile exhibition swim for the benefit of the big crowds who thronged the baths.

Track & Field

By FRED HOEY

CHARLEY REIDPATH, THE GREAT QUARter miler who represented Swarthmore College in the intercollegiate meets, is undecided whether he will be candidate for the American Olympic team to compete in Berlin, Germany, next year. Reidpath is hanging up his track togs and has the star ribbon to prove to the fans and himself that he is through for the mark, but he is not quite sure. This country is pretty well off for quarter milers, but the fine men of Reidpath's speed and gameness are rare.

HARVEY CORN, THE FORMER IRISHAmerican A. C. mainstay, who has been training Celtic has announced his engagement to a fair maid.

JERRY DOWNEY, CAPTAIN OF PRANKtown A. C. team, figures on a thorough workout for the quarter-mile track star next week. Downey is training for the Penn relays, according to New York dope. Howard Drew will be entered in the 100-yard dash, and Drew is considered a comer in another to come East and show the Pennsylvania sprinters what the real article of track means between Charlie Rice and Drew.

THE YALE TRACK TEAM WILL BE handicapped through the loss of Captain Hamer.

ONE NEW YORK EXPERT HAS FAILED to see much in the work of Jim Thorpe, the Indian boy who is the undisputed champion all-round athlete of the world. Thorpe, who performs at length on the season Meredith and Mercer, Penn stars, will be tested.

THERE WILL BE A MAN IN CHARGE of the locker building at Franklin Field on to-morrow's meet, who will see that members of North Dorchester A. C. unison, who have not with difficulty in finding a place for them.

THE VALUE OF CAREFUL ATTENTION to details is a new thing in athletics, but the same value as those turned in by later performers in last Saturday's quadrangular will be played. The original program called for a game tomorrow and the second game on Saturday. The regular Saturday game probably will be played on Wednesday or Thursday of next week, as it is necessary to give the ponies at least four days of rest between games.

FUTURE TRACK MEETS IN THE BOSton district will be run off on Saturday, as Dan O'Reilly, chairman of the committee, has decided to do away with the Wednesday afternoon meets, which are quite unfair to contestants who have to work for a living. The change was made at the request of a number of the leading athletes, who claim that the Wednesday meets are unfair to them, as they cannot get off from their employers to attend the meets.

CHARLIE KILPATRICK, THE OLD HALFmile star, is coaching the Cambridge Latin High School track and field team, and if the boys have the right stuff in them Charlie is the man to find it and bring it out.

"THE BEST EYE" IS THE MANNER IN which Jimmy Connolly, the popular member of the Irish-American A. C. track team, refers to Jimmy Connolly, the popular member of the Irish-American A. C. track team, refers to Jimmy Connolly's ability to judge distances.

DARTMOUTH OUGHT TO HAVE A FINE relay track team next season, as most of this year had some other born in the making and if a couple of Cornell and Columbia men are secured as strength in the division.

JIMMY LEE, THE FORMER B. A. A. middle-distance star, is now coaching athletes in Yonkers. Jimmy coached Willie Gordon to a victory in the Irish-American A. C. games in the Fifth.

"SPORTSMAN" BRINGS UP A GOOD point in connection with the Boston A. A. games in which he says that contestants should make some trouble in the open meets this summer.

JIMMY DUFFY OF THE B. A. A. IS being groomed in the Mayo mile to be held in Troy on July 4. Duffy, it is thought, will meet Willie Gordon, the fast Yankee boy, in this event. Duffy is a Medford athlete.

FRANK KANALY, TRAINER OF THE M. I. T. track team, is developing one of the best local track men on the team to England for a meet with Oxford and Cambridge. Kanaly looks for Hans Holmer and Billy Lee to make the trip, and if they do they will be a formidable team, as will a company Frank on the trip.

Bob Brown, who was third in the Brockton Marathon, is confident that he was placed unfairly by officials, and that he would have finished second had he not been fouled. Although tied up in the finish, he said to be able to run a fast 2:40.

Pete Campbell, quartermiler of the Dorchester Club track team, is a clever athlete and his true form should make some trouble in the open meets this summer.

The entry for the Scotch sports are: 100-yard dash, Gerard, Pitt, 880-yard run, Thorpe; high jump, Bonthron, Princeton; pole vault, Meredith, Penn. The other men in the meet will be the same one used 25 years ago when Gerard first ran. Gerard has been signed up for it.

Coach Stewart, of Harvard will have two men to choose from for the Dartmouth class meet, Wilson and Fogler. Neither of these men are developed and the Crimson coach will need only to speak to get them.

There is a movement on foot in this city to have Roger Drew, the Coast sprinter, with Charlie Reidpath, the University of Illinois star, Olympic candidate, one of the greatest sprinters ever developed, and the auto-hatted youth would make him step some.

Hedley Cornell's record-breaking two-miler, in the final sport, showed Jack Meakley a thing or two in the interscholastic, which continued the great coach that he had the goods.

Ted Meredith is unquestionably one of the greatest quarter-milers that ever ran the distance, but there are those who have made a better track athlete. Ted believes that Lon S. Tremont of Penn was the most likely man that he ever saw. Long's record of 47.45 seconds when the Penn star broke down.

Wyn Rowe Wefers was asked how much he thought he could improve on his record. He replied that he would improve much. "I am only a boy yet," he said, "and I hope to be able to run a fast 2:40.

Former athletes who threaten to try to come back to track and field this year are Jack Scharman and Lee Sullivan of Manchester, N. H. Both men are rated as good shot putters. Harry Wagner, one of the best throwers in the game, also threatens to take a stand in the start, which causes us to wonder that an old timers' reunion has not been arranged.

By JACK CONWAY.

MIKE GIBBONS and George "Knockout" Brown are in our midst today prepared for their twelve round bout at the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night. Both boxers will take a short workout this afternoon at the Arena, and will then be ready for the fray. Gibbons and Brown each claim that they have not experienced any trouble in reducing to 158 pounds, which is the weight at which they have agreed to scale at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

On paper it looks like a regular big league fight. It is the most important glove contest which has been arranged by the Atlas Club since "Gunboat" Smith defeated Sailor Langford, our fellow townsman, at the Arena last November.

BROWN will probably outweigh Gibbons by about five pounds, as the skilful Michael very seldom goes higher than 153 pounds. But regardless of this handicap in weight, the St. Paul man will enter the ring a favorite in the betting. It is believed that his remarkable speed and ability as an infighter will enable him to break in a winner.

Gibbons is not worrying a great deal about the match, and says that he will give the wise boys another setback. It will be remembered that Bob Moha, the Milwaukee middleweight, ruled a 10 to 7 favorite over Brown in their recent tussle at the Atlas Club, but that the Chicago Greek outchassed his opponent and easily won the decision.

IT cannot be said that tomorrow night's fight is a championship affair, as there is not such a title as middleweight title holder. There are several young men who admit that they are the leaders of the 158-pound glove men, but, sad to relate, they are not considered seriously by the noble citizens who hold down ringside seats around the big league circuit.

Billy Murray, the California middleweight, claims that he is champion of the 158-pounders as a result of his win over Al McCoy, but from here it looks as though friend Gibbons could dispose of Murray and McCoy on the same night and still be fresh enough to attend a fatig ball.

BROWN believes that his punching ability and his aggressive tactics will enable him to come home to the lead. As Gibbons is also liable to fight as well as box, the dear old fight "fans" should witness some merry sport provided Gibbons and Brown do what they claim they will. A good preliminary bout has also been arranged by Matchmaker Johnny Kelley, and plenty of action is expected.

STRANGE as it may seem, "Kid" Williams, the Baltimore bantamweight who has been rated as a favorite for his twenty-round bout with Champion Johnny Coulon, which will be staged in Vernon, Cal., on the morrow night. Williams has a big following on the coast as a result of his two victories over Eddie Kaplan, the Frisco bantamweight.

It is a question whether Coulon will be able to box in his old time form. The Chicago title holder has done only a little work with the hemp ropes during the past few years. He has been out of the ring part of the time and in his few ring contests he has not shown to advantage.

Win for Von Bernuth.

KING OF SPRINT STARS TO RACE AT BEACH OVAL

The matching of Walter Rutt, the world's Spring bike champion, who will make his first local appearance at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night and Alfred Goullet, the Australian little-holder, has made a big bit with the bike fans and a record crowd is looked for.

This event, together with a three-cornered 20-mile motor-paced race with Clarence Carmen, Eddie Root and Menus Bedell as the competitors, rounds out the best program arranged for the beach oval so far this season.

Among the other races carded for tomorrow night are a two-mile amateur handicap, Australian pursuit race for professionals, five-mile open amateur, one-mile invitation amateur and a one-mile professional.

A big list of local stars will appear in these races, including the Turville brothers of Revere, the Rollins of Everett, the Connellys of Everett, Patsy Logan, the South Boston veteran, Hugh MacPartland, the ovals big favorite, John Barry of Cambridge, Bert Jones of Revere, Steve Robinson, Alvin Loftes, Harry Jackson, Michael Barber, Vincent Madonio of Providence, and Fred Herbert of Fall River.

Base Ball Tickets FREE!

How does that sound? Free tickets to Fenway Park and Walpole street!

Free tickets to the ball games, that is to say, nevertheless, as the thousands who sat comfortable reserved seats at the ball games last year, paying good money for them.

And this all on the columns of the AMERICAN.

Here's how: Thousands of numbered checks have been and are being distributed each day among AMERICAN readers. Each check contains a special number.

A list of numbers will be published in the AMERICAN every week-day in the 10 o'clock evening edition and Sunday in the 4 o'clock edition. One hundred numbers will be printed each day until further notice. When a duplicate of the number which is on the check you hold appears in the 4 o'clock edition of the Sporting Extra edition, bring or send check to the AMERICAN Publication Office, No. 8 Winthrop square, and you will receive a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Braves games on the home grounds. You don't need to be present at the time the number appears in the paper. You can get the ticket at the Fenway Park or Walpole street ball park any time during the season that you present your check. If you have several checks and several tickets are due, by saving your checks and refer to the numbers each day because if the duplicate number in the AMERICAN is not found on your check you will be entitled to no ticket. But when it does appear it means a free baseball ticket for you.

Russia's Persecution of the Jews Fully Exposed

Based on the Great Dramatic Success

SYNOPSIS.

THE opening scene is laid in the apartment of John Seaton, a rich American, in the Hotel de l'Europe, St. Petersburg. Seaton's daughter, Margery, is surprised when Marya Varenka, a young Jewish governess, retained for her by her father, rushes into the room and gasps out that a man has been following her. Margery calls the man attendant in the apartment, who looks out into the corridor and reports that there is nobody there. He, however, has secretly exchanged signals with a member of the Russian Secret Service, whom he sees in the corridor. Marya calms down after a while. Margery then surprises Marya by asking her to come and live with them. Marya agrees. Julian Rolfe, an American newspaper man and friend of the Seatons, calls. He is in love with Marya. They are left alone and Marya mystifies him by admitting that the Russian government terrifies her. She will not explain further. Rolfe then tells her of his love. Marya confesses that she loves him. She declares, however, it is impossible for her to marry him, but refuses to explain this mystery. The Baron Andrey, head of the Russian Secret Service, and Count Rostov, who is engaged to Margery Seaton, are announced. Marya sends Rolfe out of the room, but tells him Miss Seaton wants him to stay to tea.

Adapted from the play presented by A. H. Woods at the Eltinge Theatre, New York City, and written by Michael Morton.

"OH, will she?" said Rolfe in his dryest Yankee manner.

"Then—I'll come back to see Miss Seaton. Good-by."

Marya held out her hand—and with boyish mischief, mingled with a man's desire not to let his own denied feelings flood his nature and cause him to make a scene of emotion or sensation, Rolfe studied that white little hand quizzically.

"Oh—I'll be right back," said he and he whirled out of the doorway.

Marya studied her rejected hand in stylish manner. Very bad Julian Rolfe refused to take it? And this wonder was exactly the effect that Rolfe had meant to produce. Love was until a bit of a game with him. It was soon enough to be a grim reality.

The waiter ushered in to the room Baron Stepan Andrey and his nephew, Count Nikolai Rostov, the betrothed husband of Margery Seaton. The manner of the servitor was quite altered now, and was fairly unctuous with respect for the Russian noblemen in their formal afternoon dress. But even as he handled the sable coat of the Baron and the Count's fawn, collared and cuffed and lined with rich brown seal, his manner was tranquilly lacking in the back-bending servility of the true Russian servant, who is servile because he was once a serf.

RUSSIAN OF RUSSIANS.

Baron Andrey was a man of about fifty. In the land of golf and motor seats and automobiles and kelley pool, he might have been a ruddy, well-dressed man of approaching middle age, portly and of sporting tendencies. If an American, he would have been the nater familias, with a great predilection for indulging his pretty daughters in their hearts' desires and chuckling their pretty friends under the chin with a request that they dance with him at Mrs. Fitz-Smith's tonight if he wasn't getting too old for the debutantes. Decidedly in America the Baron would have been a ruddy-faced, well-fed pillar of the church, of society and of the family, and no interest in the minimum wage law would have made him overpay—or fail to employ a pretty girl.

But Baron Andrey was a Russian of the Russians—an outworn route and a well-preserved old man-of-the-world at fifty. His calculating glance at appraisal as he caressed Marya's youthful figure with guarded eyes of evil interest marked him for what he was—a carrion creature. His clothes were immaculately cut and of perfect fit, but were worn with rich and rare and chosen with a love of elegance that just escaped barbarity. In the coldness of Russia the Baron seemed an exotic figure. He suggested the swamp and the jungle—decay and poison to the eye that penetrated beyond the insignia of his rank and exalted position of hereditary rank and importance as head of Russia's great system of secret police—the danger "Okrana."

Count Nikolai Rostov was of the best type of the younger Russian. He was a magnificent figure of young manhood with a clean mind in a healthy body. Travel and cosmopolitan interests had given him a breadth of view and a charm of manner that were well calculated to win an impressionable young girl like Margery Seaton. He was a son of the world in its cleanest sense—he was in knowledge and friendship a citizen. But whatever the possibilities of Nikolai Rostov's nature—whatever he had assimilated and acquired, there was a firm foundation below and superstructure above; acquired characteristics were walled about by Nature, hereditary and environment.

Nikolai Rostov was a Russian.

"Good afternoon, Baron—Excellency"——and Marya bowed to the distinguished guests we have just been putting under the mystifying glass with our American less Majeste indifference to rank a little.

"If we are not disturbing you," said the Baron suavely.

"No—we were expecting you," smiled the girl.

"I have been hearing your name mentioned freely of late," said the Baron. "He had a certain bit of knowledge, where this girl was concerned—he had certain suspicions and certain intentions. With due craft and diplomacy he meant to approach the subject and work out his plans for exposing Marya Varenka.

"I didn't know any one was so interested in me," answered Marya, determined to see in this remark a bit of flattery, such as any woman must the more appreciate when it comes to her from so distinguished a person as the Baron Stepan Andrey.

"He is very much in love"—— began the Baron, enjoying his opportunity to play his fish a bit. "With your pupil." He concluded his sentence after he had duly admired the girl's flushing start of surprise. "But he never mentions Margery without Marya."

Since men were men and social distinctions have existed, the masculine lord of the manor has found a deliciously clandestine "when the cat's away the mice will play" joy in flirting with pretty governesses and companions when the women of their own rank and file were safely absent. Count Rostov clicked his heels and bowed with ironic ceremony.

"Forgive the familiarity, Marya Varenka. I already look upon you as one of the family."

"You're very kind," said the girl simply. She could not quite determine whether she were being hailed or no—but she had a feeling that she must somehow gain the good will of these big lords of dominion in their little chat. What they wanted from her, she could not tell—but whatever their purpose, she must be amiable—that she knew.

"Oh! By the way, have you seen our American friend, Mr. Rolfe, today" asked the Baron lightly.

Marya felt the waiter's eye upon her as she replied with an effort to equal the Baron's light inconsequence of tone.

"I believe Miss Seaton said he was coming to tea—I'll go and tell her you're here."

A SERIOUS MATTER.

"Don't go, please," said Baron Andrey—but the "please" held a command.

"I know the count is anxious to see her," smiled the girl.

"Yes, but for the moment I am more anxious to have a few words with you," replied the Count's uncle.

"With me?" asked Marya. For the moment she was only surprised—but she knew that fear and fright were not far away.

To any Russian girl this interview would have held some suggestion of terror; to Marya Varenka it held a distinct menace. But she determined to put her worst fears aside and meet the situation as if it were only some difficulty of the moment.

"A serious matter," said Nikolai Rostov.

"It is very unusual to see the Count in a serious mood," said the girl, forcing back her startled surprise and compelling her voice to keep a light timbre.

"I think you will be interested; it's very confidential," said the Baron, bending gallantly over the great settee, where Marya had sunk, looking very small and helpless and unfit to cope with the diplomacy of Russia as represented by these well-groomed aristocrats of limitless power.

"I am flattered that the Count should think me worthy of his confidence. Naturally, I am most interested in everything that concerns him."

"It doesn't concern me. It is of far more importance," said Count Rostov. "It concerns Russia."

His tone was gravely polite—and inquisitorial. The girl had a feeling of being trapped between these two tall figures standing implacably one on either side of her. She had only her woman's wits and feminine wiles of coquetry to bring to the battle to come. She wondered if these would enable her to cope with them—or would the battle be to the strong.

The Count continued with implacable politeness:

"Mr. Rolfe is a young and impulsive journalist who is quite capable of sending very sensational stories to his paper about us—like all sensational stories they will be copied by every paper through the world, and so you see he has a far-reaching influence."

"And so—you are cultivating that influence."

"Yes. He has been useful in contradicting false statements made against us by prejudiced people. He has been most agreeable to us and we have tried to make it pleasant for him. Suddenly, without reason that we know of, he veers round to the other side, asks questions difficult for us to answer and acts quite at variance with what we have come to expect from his friendly attitude."

A TEMPORARY RELIEF.

"That's not extraordinary. He is here to see for himself. Mr. Rolfe is a very observant man," replied Marya.

She was experiencing such relief as comes to a hard-pressed runner when at last his over-taxed lungs cease their pounding and have only the normal work of respiration to do.

"His questions could not be the result of observation," replied the Count.

"Oh!"

"Some one has been secretly poisoning his mind against us," went on the Count.

"Who?"

"That's what we want you to find out," broke in the Baron from his position near the fireplace, where he had been standing studying the girl while the Count held her attention and her guard was—for that wily old diplomat, Baron Andrey—down.

CHAPTER V.

Andre Comes Back.

A moment later Irene's father came into the room anxious to learn whether or not Irene had been disturbed. The girl was standing by her dressing table with a necklace held around her. She looked at her father with wide, frightened eyes, but strenuously denied any knowledge of the burglar.

The next morning one of the papers came out with the following article:

"The Affair of the Villa Daubrey."

"Judge Delveaux, who is in charge of the mysterious occurrence of last evening, has secured new evidence that throws some light on the situation. The arrest of the guilty party is only a question of hours."

Irene was nearly distracted. What if Judge Delveaux unwittingly should arrest his own son. How horrible. She must do something, warn him in some way. Later that day the Judge was somewhat surprised to receive an unsigned missive bearing directly upon the robbery case on which he was working.

"If you wish to save yourself from great grief and a sorrow-stricken girl from further humiliation, do not make any further inquiry in the matter of the Villa Daubrey."

Decidedly this put a different aspect on the case. Well, the only thing to do would be to go and see Monsieur Delatour himself, together they might be able to probe the mystery.

But Monsieur Delatour knew nothing of the mysterious writer. He took the letter with much interest, then gave a little start of surprise, and opened a drawer in his desk, drawing out a letter which he held up beside the other.

"The writing is unmistakable," he said, handing the two letters to the Judge. And the Judge started back as he saw the significance of the whole thing. The new letter was one from Irene to her father, and the handwriting was identically the same as that on the mysterious note which had been sent to him. The two men looked at each other a moment, and then Monsieur Delatour turned and rang a bell.

"Send Mlan Irene to me at once," he said to the servant who appeared. "We must get at the bottom of this mystery; what possible reason could Irene have for taking the part of this burglar?"

Irene came into the room a moment later and looked at Judge Delveaux appealingly. Her father addressed her sternly.

"Irene this is your letter," he said, coming to the point at once. "You might as well tell us at once who the man is that you are shielding, we are determined to get at the bottom of this disgraceful business."

"I refuse to spare you," she sobbed finally, turning to the Judge, "but as you force me to tell you, it was your own son!"

For a moment there was silence in the room save for the sobbing of the girl, the two men stood facing each other. Then Delatour stretched out his hand and the next minute the Judge had silently left the room. There was only one thing to do. As he must be arrested, but he would not be the man to do it.

When he reached home he discovered a hasty letter to the prosecuting attorney, ordering the arrest of Andre Delveaux, and asking that the affair be put in other hands. His advice was acted upon at once, and Andre's appointment was visited immediately. Maurice Santelle slept behind prison bars that night.

In the meantime a letter had been delivered to Monsieur Delatour which gratified him more than ever. It was from Andre Delveaux himself, giving his absolute name and stating that he at last felt himself worthy of Iren's love and would call the next day.

What could it mean, thought Delatour, perhaps there was a mistake somewhere, and hastily calling up his hat he surprised Judge Delaveaux a few minutes later in his private office.

"What do you make of this?" he said sadly handing Irene's letter to the Judge. "We'd better go down and see the chief of police immediately and get to the bottom."

The chief of police was somewhat surprised a little later when the two men arrived and asked to see Andre Delveaux. He was surprised that the Judge would bring Delatour with him, but a moment later when the Judge explained matters and had produced the mysterious letter, he hurriedly led the way to the cell where Santelle was confined.

The Judge loked inquiringly at the dark features of the man who had once been the son he loved. But the chief of police, relying on a bold move to give him the information required, went up to the man and said in a low voice:

"The game's up, you'd better make a clean breast of it."

Santelle started back with a curse as though expecting the real Andre to rise up and confront him.

"You're not Andre Delveaux at all are you?" went on the chief in an even voice.

The man looked around him with a sneer. "You're all too d——d easy," he snarled, and then refused to say anything more.

Judge Delveaux was sitting in his office the next day, when the door opened softly and the next instant the two men were looking into each other's eyes over the clasped hands of trust and good fellowship.

"I thought you'd be here. Just about now," said the Judge finally, "and I arranged a little family party to surprise you." And then there was a breathless moment as Andre strode across the room. Journeys end in lovers meeting, and Irene had come to the end of hers held close in her lover's arms.

THE END.

A Bachelor's Diary

Sally Shows Her Hand When Max Decides to Visit the Pretty Nurse

By MAX

APRIL 25.—It is exactly thirteen days since my last entry on your white pages, Friend Diary, and in those thirteen days I have had a strange piece of good fortune and enough bad luck to last me a lifetime. However, "the world do move," so I suppose there is plenty more misfortune coming to me!

For a long time I have been behaving like a gentleman in Field's poem:

"Shall I woo the one or other?

Both attract me—more's the pity!

Pretty is the widowed mother,

And the daughter, too, is pretty.

When I see the maiden shrinking,

By the gods, I swear I'll get her!

But anon, I fall to thinking

That the widow'd suit me better!"

Of course Jessie Boyce isn't Sally Spencer's daughter, but from point of age she might almost be—which remark would never put me back in Sally's forfeited good graces.

For forfeit they are!

TO SEE THE NURSE.

One week ago I decided to go to Ambreville to see my pretty nurse. I felt sure that proximity in the country in spring would bring my budding romance to flower. So I ordered the car made ready, told Manetta and Richards to prepare for a weekend in the country, and selected a few new cravats and a gala hatband in preparation for my trip.

Then I went over to say good-bye to Sally, and to tell her that I hoped she would not miss me—in the real hope that she would. This, Diary, is a faithful report of our conversation:

"Ambreville—to visit a trained nurse's sick sister? Oh, Max. I'm over sixteen and I've seen the nurse. But don't you think that our most eligible bachelor ought to manage an affair of that sort—more quietly."

"Sally," I replied, wishing she were a man so I could use picturesque English, "I am very proud of Jessie Boyce's disinterested friendship for Manetta and me, and I am taking my little ward along."

"Disinterested? Oh, Max, you are a baby! You ought to have a business manager—or a wife!"

"Perhaps I'll have both soon, Sally."

"You'd better!" replied Sally; "unless you want to be the villian of a breach of promise suit with a pretty nurse—or some other encouraged and discarded lady—as the heroine. It might even be that I'd have to try to part you from a million or so, Max. Jack didn't leave me very well off."

I looked at Sally's costly mourning, her burnished marcelled locks. I smiled the $12 an ounce perfume that used to go to my head. I gazed about Sally's Adam music room with its priceless tapestries and cream enamelled rose brocade furniture. And then I spoke as seriously as might be, ignoring that sinister suggestion of a breach of promise suit:

"Sally, if you ever needed a lift, you'd come to an old friend—wouldn't you?"

Then Sally jumped to her feet with a shrill little laugh and cried:

"Max, you will send this telegram for me on your way home?"

The message read: "Count Georges D'Artois, Motor Hillard, Washington, D. C.

"Shall be quite disengaged this week-end. Delighted to see you. Sara Spencer."

And I immediately began to wonder whether Sally was replying to a request on the part of the Count for permission to come to Boston or I was being commissioned to send her invitation. But I suddenly felt that it did not matter!

HE WOULD BE SURE.

Our one evening of madness had been a little chain binding me to her. Chivalry, habit, old friendship and the memory of her soft, yielding lips and cool, clinging arms held me. A man would be sure of love, Diary. A man would be sure of love, Diary. He does not want to wonder if the force of his feeling is compelling a response, or if the thought of his eligibility is buying it. He wants to know that love is coming to him as freely, as spontaneously as its gives it. He wants to share emotion that is absolutely mutual.

That is how I had thought it was with Sally and me. And my own loyalty veered a bit before the youthful innocence and charm of Jessie, the generosity of Sally's self-surrender still held me.

But a man who could hint of breach of promise suits was thinking of the millions and not of the man. That is the one lightning moment of vision.

So I said, sincerely enough, "I'm sure you'll enjoy the Count's visit, Sally."

"And he? Do you think he will enjoy his visit as much as you will yours—to your little trained nurse?"

"I hope so."

"Auf wiedersehen, Sally."

"Auf wiedersehen!? GOOD-BY—and I hope I'll never see you again."

"Sally," I began, and then, like the coward I am, becoming, I fled. For tears were blinding over the blaze in Sally's eyes, and I did not want to stay and comfort the "widowed and fatherless."

At my door Tompkins arrested the click of my latchkey.

"A gentleman's been waiting to see you for an hour, Mr. Max."

Well, Diary, the "gentleman" was Guy Norwell, the lawyer who has looked after the affairs of my bond house for years. It appeared that things were in a bad way and that the firm of Y. & Co., founded by my grandfather, has gone steadily downhill, owing to the indifference of his grandson. I thought of the old saying, "Three generations from shirt-sleeves to shirtsleeves," and wondered vaguely how I would enjoy being a poor man.

"Is there any hope of saving Y. & Co.?" I asked.

"Can you borrow two million and hustle like the devil?" asked Guy Norwell.

"I can," said I—though I scarcely see how I was sure of that, since I had never borrowed two cents nor hustled like the least of Satan's little imps.

However, I was ready to fight.

That was a week ago, Friend Diary. Tomorrow the world will know that Y. & Co. has been wiped out—another old firm gone to the wall. I don't know yet what is saved from the wreck. I only know that at thirty-eight I start over in life—I, who never "started" at all!

Of course Sally Spencer never will see me again. No lady will ever find it worth her while to sue Max the Pauper for breach of promise—he might compromise and marry her!

It will be weary months before I can support Manetta and myself—much less a wife.

I wonder if an idler and a dreamer, who let the millions piled up by his father and grandfather slip between his prodigal fingers can climb the single rung of the Ladder of Success.

My one piece of luck is the break with Sally—it came in time.

And now I must consider my pretty Manetta and myself—for a man who is penniless at thirty-eight and who has never earned a dollar in his whole useless life?

(In the next chapter, Max tells of how two women treated him when he met at the foot of the Ladder of Success.)

A SCIENTIFIC WAY TO REMOVE UNSIGHTLY HAIR

Apply a few drops of El Rado, the liquid hair remover, on the growth; liquid hair remover, on the growth; after washing off the surface of it will remain. The ingredients in El Rado are used by many ladies for exactly the same purpose, which proves conclusively how perfectly harmless it is.

This wonderful preparation is the result of a long series of scientific experiments, and is proving a veritable godsend to women troubled with hair growing on the chin, cheek, neck or arms. Use a simple application of El Rado to nutrient, antiseptic Rasinol Ointment on the same and in a few minutes all signs of hair will disappear, leaving the skin smooth, clear and velvety. The action of El Rado is absolutely safe, sure and thorough.

El Rado is coming to be regarded as scientific and indispensable as the razor or safety razor. Test it on your arm. Your money back if it is not as represented. LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks opened at declines, but soon rallied and in spite of dullness were averaging higher by afternoon. Among advances at that time were Canadian Pacific 1¼, Southern Pacific ½, Reading ½, American Can ¾, Steel ¼, Amalgamated ¼, American Smelting 1¼, Northern Pacific ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ¼, and Union Pacific ¼. Missouri Pacific and New Haven were unchanged. Lehigh Valley was off ¼.

In Boston New Haven was up ¾, while United Fruit had advanced ¾. Boston Elevated was up 2½ at 85¾. It had touched 86. Shoe was off ¼. Mines were irregular. Utah Copper preferior had shaded; Ganby was unchanged, while Calumet & Arizona and North Butte were off ¾.

STOCKS OPEN AT DECLINE.

There was a reactionary tendency when markets opened in this country, owing largely to recessions of Americans in London. The weakness of the latter, which was not pronounced, was attributed to the depression occasioned by the failure of an important banking concern in Portugal. This morning it was announced that the Canadian Agency, Ltd., which was closely connected with Speyer, Milne & Grenfell, the banking concern referred to, has suspended payment. Sentiment in Paris continued to be rather hysterical. St. Petersburg failures, the impending government loan, liquidation at home and from London, Antwerp and other continental centres, and bad air reports affect in the French capital. Berlin was the steadiest of European markets, but exceedingly high money in many the Eastern rate case decision is awaited with almost as much interest as in America.

TRADERS IN A WAITING MOOD.

Business was very quiet at the start in New York and did not increase in volume to any extent during the morning. Traders were inclined to wait the report of the Cotton Producers' Association and the government grain report. But within a few minutes the tone changed, and the price trend changed. Most issues in which there was movement attained gains. Steel recovered on early loss and rose fractionally. Its report is unfilled tonnage is due on Wednesday. Bears were as much mystified by the rise of stocks this morning as on Saturday, and there was more covering. They cannot fathom an upward movement in the face of early news from Mexico, scare stories about the cotton crop, failures in Europe and pending legislation and "big business" attacks. To-day, it appeared, were only inversely instrumental. One solution is there is no bullish stock for sale and the slightest demand is enough to cause an advance. The immediate cause of the morning advance was another Washington report that the rate case decision is likely to be announced any moment. It looks as if shown everybody expects the Interstate Commerce Commission to concede enough to railroads to swell their receipts.

MORE GOLD FOR EUROPE.

The announcement that $5,000,000 more in gold had been engaged for exportation to Europe had no effect on the money market. More than $40,000,000 has been obtained in this country since the first of the year. It is expected that millions will be taken in New York this week for shipment abroad, and that possibly London will directly figure in the transactions.

New Haven was among the weakest stocks at the opening. The report suits against the road's directorate by small stockholders was no cause of the decline. Another factor was the belief that revelations concerning the road's past management are sure to result in prosecutions of some kind. But the issue subsequently rallied and by midday had regained most. Lehigh Valley also rose above it's morning low. This was significant of covering. The road has been under strong bear pressure for some time. Canadian Pacific was stagnant for awhile, but by noontime was one of the strongest stocks. American Beet Sugar made a material gain. But the morning advance, though general, averaged small. Leading coppers followed the same, although it was reported that small dealers were offering metal in London at 14 cents and large ones at 14¾ cents a pound without being able to make a market. First hour business in the big American market did not total 15,000 shares.

LOCAL MARKET STILL QUIET.

There was little about the local market to inspire interest at any time during the day. The list ranged lower at the opening, with trading restricted to a few issues. It mirrored the one in New York. Somewhat local issues advanced when New Haven responded to the improvement in New York. Boston Elevated rose a couple of points and Island Creek a point. Coppers were irregular.

The Boston bank statement shows that surplus reserve decreased $2,-760,214. The New York decrease was $1,015,714.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The International Harvester Corporation reports for 1913 that income from operations totalled $19,356,824, which compares with $27,939,890 for 1912 (before dissolution). Net profit was $7,153,295, compared with $16,-395,897 in 1912. Surplus on December 31 last was $18,445,522, against $21,-586,544. For 1913 surplus was $30,035,252.

Shipments of anthracite coal in May were 6,281,553 tons, compared with 5,390,742 tons in May, 1912, an increase of 890,811 tons. For five months shipments have been 26,815,-662 tons, as compared with 25,851,207 tons for the corresponding period last year, a decrease of 2,066,204 tons.

DEMOCRATS NOW FEAR DEFEAT BECAUSE OF WILSON'S POLICIES

By B. C. FORBES,
Business Editor.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Look out for a sudden transformation at any moment.

The well-defined impression in Washington is that the Interstate Commerce Commission is now putting the finishing touches upon its epoch freight rate decision. I have no inside information on this point.

I am given to understand, however, that the decision, on the whole, will be construed as favorable.

If this expectation be falsified, then hell-to-pay will be the inevitable New York result.

If this expectation be falsified, then hell-to-pay will be the inevitable New York result.

One story going the rounds at Washington, where I spent last week, is so wild and so sensational that I have hesitated to publish it.

Let me give it entirely without vouching for its truth, as to me it seems scarcely credible.

EXPOSE BRYAN'S PLOT.

Bryan, so runs the whispered report, has hatched a gigantic scheme to "get even" with high finance, whose activities he blames for thrice depriving him of the presidential honors. He has planned to bedevil the whole railroad situation. It is said, by delaying the rate decision, and hopes to see the Interstate Commerce Commission a political choice. The conduct of the commission heretofore is understood to have been exactly to his liking—it has pounced upon one railroad after another and has intimated that it would explode bombs after bombs under important systems.

Then, at the right moment, when bankruptcy faces many systems, Bryan and his allies will bring forward a scheme of governmental ownership. So runs the rumor.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

Another impression held at Washington is that the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission lean towards government ownership. Since, under any real argument along such lines, the Commissioners would be eligible for positions of tremendous importance.

Now would they, it is pointed out, object very strenuously to seeing the railroads receive preliminary chastening in the form of even more pointed reductions in the value of their securities than have been witnessed since the sunshine speculation phenomenal.

The Commissioners are all Republican nominees, with the exception of those recently appointed, and depression might demonstrate the Commission need not occasion them any acute mental distress.

I am not familiar enough with political undercurrents at the capital, not versed enough in politics, I suppose, to pass any dogmatic opinion as to the value or the worthlessness of the rumors which are said to be floating in the air. Therefore, I offer each and every one of these rumors "as is."

What I do know, however, is that the New Haven disturbance has been and are destined to give to the future tremendous impetus to the demand for governmental ownership of our railroads.

Even conservative railroad leaders are now beginning to realize this.

OWNERSHIP INEVITABLE.

President E. P. Ripley of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, told me, after Thursday's session of the New Haven investigation, of which he was an interested listener, that government ownership has now become inevitable. His deglerer his prospect, yet he cannot pretend to be blind to the unmistakable trend of events.

I mean to print later in the week a whole column which President Ripley dictated to me on this subject.

The politicians are hearing from home on their anti-business crusade. They are becoming nervous.

They would be fairly glad to drop the whole disturbing program until next session if President Wilson would only let them.

And I question whether the Senate will refuse to do his bidding, so widespread has become the opposition to jamming through a jumble of laws, the full effect of which no mortal can foresee.

Oscar Underwood's attitude, as outlined by the AMERICAN, is regarded as peculiarly significant. He is anxious to give the business world a rest and to have Congress disperse at the earliest possible moment.

I talked with other members of Congress, and they are far from happy over the general position, industrial and political.

A Republican landslide at the Fall elections is feared by many administration leaders.

The only thing that can save Wilson, it is declared, would be the triumph of his Mexican peace policy—and how a "triumph" can be evolved from the present muddle few can divine.

"PSYCHOLOGICAL VIEW" AGAIN.

The few business men with whom I have had opportunity to talk during the week are either amused or incensed over Wilson's fine-sounding exhortations to the business world. "Think you are prosperous and you will find you are prosperous" is the gist of his advice to men who find their affairs in deplorable condition.

"If President Wilson had had ten years of actual experience in carrying on a business, if he had had to meet his weekly payrolls, if he had to watch and means of raising money to meet his weekly payrolls, if he had much his surplus rather than avoid and bankruptcy begin to stare at him out of the glass he would not fail such childish buncombe," protested one unhappy business man. "It

The Dead Japanese Empress—and the Bodyguard Buried With Her

We Are Not Far From the Savages, Whose Servants and Wives Were Buried with Them, Alive.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

The Dowager Empress of Japan died and has been buried.

The court will mourn for two years. And the solemn coronation of the reigning Emperor will be postponed—BECAUSE THE RICE TO BE USED AT THE CEREMONY OF CORONATION MUST NOT BE PLANTED IN A YEAR OF MOURNING.

The burial of the Japanese Empress reminds us that we are the descendants of savages, and still have the savage beliefs and customs in us.

It was like a picture from the strange past, when they put that little Japanese woman into the grave, with all the "honors" that could do no good to her frail and decaying body.

She lay in her coffin, stiff and alone as it went into the ground.

And at each of the four corners of the coffin they buried a life-sized figure of a warrior made of clay.

A very big digging in the ground was necessary for that burial, as they put away the body of the little woman, and at each corner made a hole big enough to contain a warrior laid out at full length.

These warriors were imitation men of clay. But they looked imposing as they were lowered, each to guard his corner of the coffin.

They were as big as very tall men. They were dressed in full armor. They had helmets on their heads, bows and quivers full of arrows, swords sheathed and iron shoes on their feet.

They are supposed to be the guardian warriors that will go as ghosts with the ghost of the dead Dowager Empress and protect her on her travels through the mysterious uncertainty.

The greater part of Japan believes that the Dowager Empress actually has four fighting warriors armed with bows and arrows—comical thought—to meet the terrors and uncertainties of the infinite universe.

We need not smile at this Japanese funeral, for it reminds us of what we ALL were but yesterday.

If this little Empress of Japan had died a few years earlier not men of clay but living men would have been buried with her—four faithful men that she could rely upon. And as she lay dying she would have been comforted by the thought that four men standing before her would be murdered when she died and their bodies put under ground for company.

And that was not a Japanese custom alone, but a general human custom.

Among the ancestors of all of us, when the ancestors were sufficiently prosperous, that was the usual way.

When a man died his wives and servants were butchered and buried with him, and even his cooking utensils, his favorite horse, his dog and his weapons went into the grave there that he might have them when he got out—IF he got out.

When a house was built a human being was killed and planted under the cornerstone.

The human blood was to bring luck to the edifice.

Considering the infamous attack that Russians have made on innocent, defenceless Jews in connection with the so-called ritual murder, it is interesting to read that the most recent ritual murder AUTHENTICATED in Europe was that of a human being murdered by the Russians and buried under the cornerstone of a great building in Moscow.

Very humorous and pathetic in our eyes are those four clay warriors, with their bows and arrows, their swords, their iron shoes and their helmets, lying at the four corners of the little Japanese woman's coffin—while the worms gather and the world goes on.

ENCOURAGING also is that picture of a superstitious funeral, which reminds us that we are not far from absolute savagery, and that we need not worry because of our lack of intellectual freedom.

You look out of the window and see the farmer scattering fertilizer on the fields. A horse or a dog dies and it is buried at the roots of a tree. YOU know why.

Formerly when they plowed a new field, digging it up by hand or with a little plow made of a sharp stick, they murdered a human being and buried the body in a corner TO BRING LUCK.

They observed year after year that where the corpse was buried the grass was rich and green or the crop unusually fine, and they said to themselves, "The corpse really DID bring luck."

Little by little they found out that it was not the luck but the fertilizer that made the crop good. They observed that on the battlefield where a dead body was rotting every few feet the grass grew well indeed.

And so they learned to use fertilizer to make the crops good instead of murdering "for luck."

We observe what men have done through history, we see their strange habits, we realize how near we are to the savage and how near the savages were to the animals.

And we take courage and new hope, and believe that the human race in the end will be worthy of the opportunities and of the habitation given to it.

Russian Suggests Disease Germs May Be Killed by Suspending Life of Victim with Frost

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

I DO not know whether the report published recently about the passing of a living man's blood through a tube exterior to his body, and its return to his veins and arteries after having been subjected to a process of purification during its absence from its natural channels, was strictly and literally true or not, but at any rate the idea underlying it is not too bold for the spirit of modern surgery, which, as we all know, has certainly done other things equally incredible.

Besides, there is something about it which awakens the impatient desire which we all feel to lay violent hands directly upon the enemies hidden in the intricacies of our circulatory system that mine the citadels of life by underground siege. To run the life fluid of a human being through a sterilizing plant, and then restore it to its owner, freed of all impurities, is a conception worthy of the century which has created wireless telegraphy and realized the dream of human flight.

It is difficult to guess whether another new idea, which is entertained by the Russian physiologist Bachmetieff, will appear to the reader as more or less extraordinary than that of which we have just been speaking.

Bachmetieff proposes to make use of the principle of the suspension of life to get rid of microbes that cannot be driven out of the system. It appears that his idea was suggested to him by the alleged return to life of fish that have been solidly frozen for weeks. The statement, although disputed, has often been made that fish so thoroughly congealed that they have become as hard as blocks can be completely revived simply by the gradual application of heat. It is said that fishermen in northern Europe are well aware of this.

Bachmetieff began his experiments with insects, and after he found that he could, at will, suspend their vital activity by cold and restore it by heat, he tried a similar method with mice and rats. He established the fact that, with the aid of artificial respiration, those animals could be enabled to support the lethargy due to freezing and afterward be brought back to full activity by the application of heat.

Then he recalled the fact that certain microbes of disease, and particularly the bacillus of consumption, are unable to survive the effects of a temperature a few degrees below the freezing point, if it is continued for two or three weeks. The question immediately arose in his mind:

"Would it be possible to suspend, by cold, the animation of a human body for a sufficient length of time to destroy the bacilli of tuberculosis without depriving the subject of the experiment of the power to recover all his vital functions when revived by the application of heat?"

He decided that it might be possible, and so this bold Russian is credited with the intention to try his method on a human being, if he can find one whose faith and courage are equal to the test, and, in the meantime, it is said, he proposes to make an essay with monkeys. If he finds that they can successfully undergo the experience of being frozen stiff for a few weeks, and can be revived by heat and artificial respiration after the expiration of a period sufficiently long to ensure the destruction of the disease germs in their blood, then he will feel more confident in offering the same method of cure to the animal that the monkey most resembles.

I do not pretend to say that Bachmetieff's ideas should be accepted seriously. We never accept any thing seriously until success has made it serious.

Of course the thing could not be done with higher animals in the simple way in which Bachmetieff puts his insects into their frigid sleep and then revives them, but when it has once been established that any organic being whatever that is endowed with the mysterious principle called life is able to undergo such an experience it will not do to declare dogmatically that science may not some day discover a method of extending the process to all living creatures. It would certainly be no greater wonder than many things which during the present generation have risen out of the unknown to surprise us with the littleness and the vanity of our knowledge.

In the Land of Perpetual Day

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q. (1) Is the Arctic Circle, the land of perpetual day in Summer months, what is the path traversed by the sun from 6 a. m. one day to 6 a. m. the next day following?

(2) We are told by scientists that the universe is balanced; our earth and neighbors as well as fixed stars are in a neutral zone where the gravity pull from all other bodies is equal. This being true, what is the explanation of comets which fly into space, for 50 or 75 years and return, and not fall into the sun, even when they come within a short distance?

A. (1) Let any day be taken when the sun is north of the equator and Summer is on in the Arctic Circle, and see what it will do from one instant in that day until the same time in the next.

Say July 29, 1908, at noon, the centre of the sun was 20 degrees 42 minutes 15 seconds north of the equator. And at noon on the 31st 20 degrees 39 minutes 33.6 seconds of an arc. Then, during the twenty-four hours the sun's centre had moved southward and apparently around the celestial vault once. Then its apparent path was one turn of a spiral, precisely like a thread on a screw.

(2) The universe of stars—all suns—is not balanced; that is, suns are not on regular orbits like the planets around them. Each sun of the 100,000,000 more or less, as shown in photographs of the entire sky, moves as a bee in a swarm.

All move here and there, to right or left, and in every other direction, entirely at random, in obedience to the varying intensities of the attraction of others, themselves in varying motion. This motion a bee must obtain from the fact that all suns move and attract. Double, triple and quadruple suns move around their common centre of gravity in fixed orbits, but the system itself moves here and there like a bee.

Minute worlds like the earth, Jupiter, Mars, Neptune, traverse orbits around the sun—all ellipses, nearly balanced, and absolutely balanced for an instant twice in each of their years when at mean distance from the sun. The equilibrium is in between attraction of the sun and centrifugal tendency away from it due to their revolution around it.

Comets making regular circuits around the sun all traverse ellipses. Those that fall in from space deeps sweep around the sun once at immense speed and dash away, never to return. All move on paths either a parabola or a hyperbola since both of these curves are open.

Every minute property of these comets has been so thoroughly equated by high mathematics that a telescope can be pointed directly toward any comet at any instant when hundreds of millions of miles beyond the range of the human eye.

The Optimist

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

[Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.]

THE fields were bleak and sodden. Not a wing
Or note enlivened the depressing wood.
A soiled and sullen, stubborn snowdrift stood
Beside the roadway. Winds came muttering
Of storms to be, and brought the chilly sting
Of icebergs in their breath. Stalled cattle mooed
Forth plaintive pleadings for the Earth's green food.
No gleam, no hint of hope in anything.

The sky was blank and ashen, like the face
Of some poor wretch who drains lifes' cup too fast,
Yet, swaying to and fro, as if to fling
About chilled Nature its little arms of grace,
The optimistic Willow spoke of Spring.

REMEMBER THE KIDDIES!

Duty of Parents Is Not to Themselves, but to Their Children—Give Them a Square Deal

By DOROTHY DIX

A TEMPEST in a teapot can wreck things as completely as a storm at sea. Temper and pride can blast lives as utterly as the wickedest sin can.

Here's a story to prove it: A young couple—both under thirty—have been married four years, and have a little girl three years old. Both husband and wife are upright, honorable people, but they are undisciplined, and lack self-control, and so they quarrelled about all sorts of foolish things and got upon each other's nerves, until last Summer they decided that they would be better apart and separated.

The wife went to live with a married sister. The husband went his way, and the child was given over to the care of the maternal grandmother, who remained on very friendly terms with her son-in-law, despite the separation between him and his wife.

Both of the little girl's parents visit her continually, and to both of them she puts up the ceaseless plaint, "When is my papa? Where is my mama?" as the case may be, and "why don't you both live here, like my grandmama and my grandpapa do?"

"But you have your mama, dear," the mother will soothe her by saying. "Yes, but I want my papa, too," the child will wail, "I want you both at the same time, and I want my home."

The child's cries have gone to the father's heart. He realizes, perhaps too late, that the first duty of parents is not to themselves, but to their children, and that no child is getting a square deal in life that isn't reared in its own home, and under the watchful and loving care of both its father and its mother.

In the light of this new knowledge, and with the pathos of the baby's cries for her own ringing in his ears, all of the petty squabbles and spats over nothing seem very small to the man and he is trying to get his wife to come back and make a new start in a new home that will be built on a securer foundation than the old one.

Let us hope that the woman has gotten her lesson, too, and that she will accept the olive branch her husband is holding out to her. In the heat of a quarrel nothing on earth looks so much like a cool oasis in the arid desert of matrimony as divorce does. Just to be rid of the nagging, of the fault finding, of the perpetual espionage, of the grinding tyranny, of the never-ending fights, how alluring the very thought! Just to be free to live one's own life unhampered, what bliss in the prospect!

But the divorced, and especially the divorced woman, finds out that divorce is not the earthly paradise she expectes it to be. She finds out that she has lost the perquisites of neither the girl nor the married woman, that people who sympathize with her don't want her to live with them, and that even the privilege of freedom carries with it the penalty of loneliness.

Be sure that many a woman who arrogantly shakes the dust of her home off of her feet as she leaves it would be glad enough to creep humbly in at the back door, if she could, after a few months of separation from her husband. The way is open to this one. May Heaven send her wisdom enough to go back, and retrieve the mistakes of her youth, and make a success instead of a failure of matrimony.

After all, what a sordidly pitiful thing it is to think of a home being wrecked, of a little child being orphaned by temper! What a confession of weakness it is on the part of two grown-up human beings not to be able to control their tongues! How little people must love their children when, for the sake of saying a few biting and unpleasant things, they are willing to jeopardize that child's whole life!

In plain English, that's what the whole situation amounts to. Every man and woman in the world who thinks at all knows that it takes a mother and a father working together in harmony to bring up a child properly. Everybody knows that the most pitiful thing in the world is a little orphan child, and the next most pitiful thing is a half orphan child.

Yet, knowing this, simply for the sake of indulging their tempers, husbands and wives will quarrel until they can endure it no longer, and then separate, thus deliberately orphaning their children.

Everybody knows that next in importance to parental influence and a Nation comes environment, and that only in a home does the child really flourish. This is so indisputably true that an effort is continually made by all the children's welfare societies to take children out of orphan asylums and put them in private families, in homes.

But when the guest has come at the proper time and is safely ensconced in the drawing room, her duties have only just begun. For, deny it as we may, the finest art of all is the hostess, his her duties. One of these is to be as sociable as possible to anyone who has chances to meet.

Even if she does not know the person touching elbows with her she is quite right in speaking to her and in chatting of the "motifs" that make up life.

The hostess, unlike perhaps to leave her position in the room—in terms "she firing line"—or, in other words, the place where she must stand to receive her guests—will feel lighter of her heart, and herself less burdened by a sense of responsibility if she sees people conversing happily together. Therefore, nobody has a right to be a wallflower. If one is too diffident to talk with a stranger within a friend's home one would best not go into society.

The veriest tyro in social life knows that one should greet one's hostess as soon as one enters her drawing room. Few persons neglect to do this. As much cannot be said about them when they take their departure.

May it not be that in the rush and absorption of everyday life we are losing some of the sweet, old time courtesy which was, after all, very lovely?

Hints for the Entertained

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

THERE are so many more guests than there are hostesses that there must, of necessity, be more discourtesies perpetrated by the entertained than by the entertainers. And they do perpetrate them.

First of all, one of the most common errors of the careless guest is to be committed before he goes to the house of his would-be hostess. It consists of his frequent habit of replying to an invitation. Those who are punctilious in such matters little know how many persons are regardless of the mails, including various functions, with another invitation!" sighs the much-sought-after man, tossing it upon his desk. "I'll answer it after a while."

There it lies, forgotten. Surely the way to social perdition might be paved with unanswered invitations.

Men are not the only sinners in this respect. The busy woman, unless she employs a social secretary, sometimes forgets her acceptance or regret.

The invitation once accepted, there are such well-known rules as to what one should do that the "wayfaring man though a fool" could scarcely go astray sufficiently to ignore them. It is needless to call attention to the fact that one should be punctual in arriving at a dinner or luncheon at the hour named. I say it is needless—and yet, is it?

Have we not all waited in the drawing room before a dinner while our hostess tried bravely to conceal the anxiety at the tardiness of some guest—knowing all the while that the dinner was being "done to death" or that the raw oysters were getting warm and the souffle cold and sodden? So, perhaps, after all, it is not superfluous to remind the reader that guests are sometimes late.

But, even if functions are of the kind that reach from one hour to another, so that the participant may appear when it suits his or her convenience, such being the case, why does he or she—it is usually she—sometimes arrive before the first hour named on the invitation, for instance, at three-thirty when the cards for the tea she is attending state specifically "from four to seven"?

Probably the questions of Bryan as to what became of those German cargoes of arms for Huerta will be answered from the throats of the guns themselves.

President Wilson's idea that the present business depression is "merely psychological" is not very satisfying to college professors on a salary than business men on the firing line. Nevertheless the theory that everything in the world is what you think it is does not extend to bank accounts.
